COAKLEY TAKEN AS INSANE

Lawyer Barred from the Bolduc Case Arrested in the Corridor at Courthouse

Timothy W. Coakley, a Boston lawyer and brilliant speaker, was today taken into custody upon a warrant issued by Judge Grant of the Probate Court, so that an examination might be made as to his mental condition. He was sent to Pierce Farm for observation.

This is the second prominent Boston lawyer to be sent to Pierce Farm within a few weeks, the other one being former Judge Henry S. Dewey.

Arrested in Corridor.

Attorney Coakley was arrested on the second floor of the court house in almost the identical spot Judge Dewey was taken recently. He was taken into custody by William K. Coburn, a constable of the Probate Court, and his assistant, A. S. Goucher.

The officers had been looking for Coakley all morning and were surprised when he appeared in the corridor of the court house shortly before the forenoon recess of the Superior Criminal Court.

Coakley walked along the corridor very coolly and stopped to chat with a newspaper man. While talking, he noticed Assistant District Attorney Lavelle coming from the court room, and rushing over to him, grasped him by the hand. They conversed for a few minutes and then Coakley started down the corridor.

As he passed the district attorney's office and away from the crowd which filled the hall outside the courtroom, where the Shaw case was being heard, the constable stepped up to him and took him by the arm. His assistant took a firm hold on Coakley's other arm, but there was no need of such precautions.

When Coakley was shown the paper and told what he was wanted for, he walked quietly with the officers down the long flight of stairs and out through the Somerset street entrance where he was placed in a waiting taxicab. He was then driven to Pierce Farm.

Debarred from Bolduc Case.

The formal complaint for Coakley's apprehension had been made by John Gaynor, superintendent of institutions of the city of Boston, and was made before Judge Grant of the Suffolk Probate Court, who also committed Judge Dewey to Pierce Farm.

Coakley will be kept at the farm for observation and a report of his condition will be made later to Judge Grant.

The last public appearance of Mr. Coakley was in the Bolduc case, last week, when he appeared as the counsel for Dr. John D. Ferguson and Mary J. O'Neil of Manchester, N. H. On account of his eccentric actions during the trial, objecting to every move made by the government and disregarding the orders of the court, he was ordered from the courtroom and debarred from the case.

Mr. Coakley went to California a few years ago in search of heatlh, stopping off in Arizona to see former District Attorney John B. Moran just before his death. News came back to Boston from Los Angeles that Mr. Coakley was recovering his health and that he would probably take up his residence in that live city.

Returning to Boston, however, it was found necessary to take him to Waverley for mental treatment.

Timothy W. Coakley is the son of the late Timothy Coakley, who died about five years ago at an advanced age after long being a prominent citizen of Cambridge and Brighton. The former was born in Cambridge about forty-five years ago and was educated in public schools there and at Boston College. Then he studied law and before he began its practice did newspaper work in this city and New York. When he was only twenty-seven he had for a client a man accused of murder and was said at that time to be the youngest lawyer who had ever been entrusted with a capital case.

He got into politics early and made a stir at once. He and the late John B. Moran were close personal friends and at times political allies. Mr. Coakley, however, had Republican leanings, which manifested themselves as long ago as when Mayor Edwin Upton Curtis was defeated by Josiah Quincy. At that time Coakley and Moran held a joint debate in old Music Hall, and there has never been anything like it before or since.

Coakley was an ardent supporter of President McKinley, and he took the stump for him in the West in the second campaign against Bryan.

Coakley was active in enlisting volunteers during the war with Spain, and after it was over visited the Philippines and China and Japan to write for the press. He has been one of the best orators of his day in Boston and could always draw and hold a crowd. He won high repute as a trial lawyer and could "think on his feet" about as quickly as any man ever raised in this vicinity.

In politics he was never amenable to organization discipline, and, like Moran, delighted to make trouble for any party machine.

Fifty Railroads Refuse to Raise Engineers' Pay

Declare Conditions Will Not Permit Granting of Men's Demands.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Fifty railroads have rejected the demands of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for an increase in wages of 18.63 per cent per annum. In the replies of the railroads made public here today it is stated that it is impossible to grant the increase.

"In view of the fact that the present rates of wages are as a rule full and liberal," says the answer, "and the railroads are financially unable to bear the increased expense involved, it is evidently impossible to grant the requests which you have submitted. The railways represented in this district are fifty in number and carry about one-half of the passenger and freight traffic of the United States. The proposed increase in wages and changes in working conditions would increase the pay of engineers of the railways of the Eastern district for the service now being rendered by the following amounts per annum: "Passenger service, $1,253,536.91; freight service, $3,578,391.73; switching service, including belt, $1,052,302.90; terminal delay, $894,154.71; other working conditions, $865,406.49; total increase, $7,553,792.74, or 18.63 per cent. This increase would be equivalent to placing on these properties a lien of $188,844.818 of 4 per cent. securities which would have preference over first mortgage bonds."

$3,000 Gem Necklace Stolen in Back Bay

General Police Alarm Sent Out for Theft from Wealthy Widow.

The Boston police were notified today that a $3,000 necklace, set with 105 selected diamonds, had been stolen from a wealthy widow who lives in the Back Bay.

The police ransacked every pawn shop and jewelry store and have sent out hundreds of circulars to the police of other cities citing that the owner will give $300 reward for their recovery.

The police have refused to disclose one very interesting detail; in fact, the most absorbing detail of all—the name of the women who lost the gems. They say they would like to, but that they have been sworn to secrecy.

The police hint that the necklace was stolen from the society woman at a Boston hotel.

Blind Horse Dashes Up Flight of Steps

Scared by Automobile He Breaks from Wagon and Plunges Into a Winthrop House.

An automobile backed into a blind horse hitched to a wagon owned by the Winthrop Cash Market in Winthrop square today. The horse broke loose from the cart, ran through the front door of the house at No. 584 Shirley street and half way up the flight of stairs, where he became wedged. Incidentally he gave John Young, who occupied the house, the surprise of his life.

Help was summoned and after a half hour's labor the horse was released. The animal was uninjured by his remarkable stunt, but was well smeared with fresh paint that Mr. Young had recently decorated his halls with. The auto which caused the trouble was operated by Dr. Porter.

Dr. Mary Walker Worse: Won't Take Medicine

Distinguished Advocate of Women's Right Also Refuses to Have Doctor.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The condition of Dr. Mary Walker, who is staying with Mrs. Nellie Van Slingerland in the Hotel Gerard, West Forty-fourth street, was said to be much worse today. Mrs. Van Slingerland says Dr. Walker refuses to take medicine or to have a doctor; also that she will eat little.

Cars at North Adams Are Blocked by Snow

NORTH ADAMS, March 25.—Seven inches of snow covers this town and the surrounding country for many miles. This is the heaviest snow storm of the year in this section. The trolley lines are completely crippled.

Across the line in New Hampshire there are eight inches of snow and every indication of mid-winter rather than the gentle Springtime. People are forced to go about in sleighs or on snow shoes and trolley traffic is at a standstill.

Shaw Pleads Not Guilty, $10,000 Bail

Returns to Jail in Default of Bond

A. W. SHAW AS HE APPEARED IN COURT TODAY—SKETCHED BY AMERICAN ARTIST.

Big Crowd in Court Room to Witness Arraignment of the Alleged Absconder.

A plea of not guilty was entered today by Arthur Willis Shaw, president of the A. W. Shaw Corporation of Freeport, Me., when he was arraigned before Judge Chase in the second session of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court on an indictment charging him with the larceny of $19,000 from his firm.

He was held in $10,000 bail for trial, the date of which has not been fixed. His counsel, James H. Vahey, asked that bail be reduced to $5,000 which he considered adequate under the circumstances. District Attorney Pelletier felt that the original surety fixed upon Shaw's return from Los Angeles, where he was arrested on information furnished by the AMERICAN, should stand.

In default of bonds Shaw was remanded to the Charles street jail. He had expected to get bail since Saturday, but the amount of sureties has made it difficult. He has not yet given up hope of raising bonds. He is impatient to get out.

A big crowd witnessed the arraignment of the alleged absconder at 11:35. The proceedings lasted four minutes. The indictment contains thirty-two counts, eight charging larceny, eight with the receiving of stolen securities, eight charging him with having been an accessory before the fact and eight acessory after the fact.

In briefly explaining the case to the court District Attorney Pelletier mentioned the name of Mrs. Georgiana M. Stuart, a co-defendant, saying that she had returned some of the securities. The fact that some of the alleged stolen securities had been refunded was an argument used by Attorney Vahey for a reduction of bail.

Shaw, who is a giant in build, looked pale and nervous, but replied to Clerk Manning's interrogation in firm voice, "Not guilty, sir!" He is six feet two inches tall and weighs more than 200.

$15 JOB IS HELD BY SPENDTHRIFT

George Pendleton Bowler, "the Harvard spendthrift," who is said to have spent $57,000 in one night in New York, is now working in Boston for $15 a week and keeping within his income. In the past few years $500,000 has passed through his hands.

Bowler has been holding down his $15 per job for many months. His friends say he has completely reformed and is trying to get on his feet again. They say that he feels that the "straight and narrow path" is the best road to travel, and that he intends to keep away from the bright lights in the future.

Bowler went to Harvard for four years, but did not graduate. While attending Harvard he began his career as a spender. He got rid of $40,000. He comes from a distinguished family. His father was George P. Bowler of Cincinnati, who left a fortune to his children, establishing a "spendthrift fund" for the son with the luxurious tastes.

GIRL IN 'MAGPIE SHOE' CLOSE RIVAL OF 'BATH TOWEL GOWN' WOMAN

LONDON, March 25.—The girl in the magpie shoe may become the popular Summer girl this year and a serious rival to the girl in the bath towel gown. The English varieties of shoes now exhibited in the shops are as follows:

All white shoe and heel, with small black patent toe cap.

White shoes, striped with black patent; white shoes with black heel; black patent vamp, with white kid top; white, with black patent toes and heel, laced at side with black laces; the "spat boot," with white upper arranged as though it wore a spat.

CARDINAL FARLEY AIDS PRIESTS' FUND

NEW YORK, March 25.—Cardinal Farley has subscribed $5,000 toward the erection of a seminary at Hawthorne, N. Y., twenty-nine miles out on the Harlem branch of the New York Central for the training of priests in foreign missionary work.

MANY LOSE LIVES IN AUSTRALIAN TYPHOON

PERTH, Western Australia, March 25.—Many lives are reported to have been lost in a typhoon which swept the northwest coast of Western Australia from Wednesday until Friday of last week. Scores of vessels were dashed to pieces on the rocks, and many buildings were demolished. The storm's ravages extended far inland.

LADY WARWICK'S SUDDEN DEPARTURE DUE TO BIG STRIKE

NEW YORK, March 25.—Lee Keedick, manager of the Countess of Warwick, said that all he knew about her sudden sailing on Saturday was contained in the letter sent him from the steamer:

> Dear Mr. Keedick—I have cables from my husband and home compelling my immediate return upon important business. The coal strike affects us considerably and my presence is necessary. Yours sincerely,
> F. L. WARWICK.

The manager said further that while all her six lectures had not been attended by capacity houses, the high prices charged for seats had made the box office receipts above the average.

Nothing is known in London as to the cause of the sudden departure of the Countess of Warwick from New York for home. The reported sickness of her daughter, who is now in London, cannot be confirmed. Her friends say she is well.

JESSE GRANT IS OUT FOR CLARK

"Put me down for Champ Clark," were the first words Jesse Grant, son of the famous General and President U. S. Grant, said today when he landed in Boston on the Ivernia, after an eight months' trip through England. The first thing that he asked the newspaper interviewers about was the political situation.

"You may put me down for Speaker Champ Clark as my candidate," said Mr. Grant. "Why? Because he's from Missouri and so am I," he replied with a laugh.

Then in a more serious vein, Mr. Grant said he favored Clark because he did not like Governor Wilson's change of attitude.

"Governor Wilson has leaped with one bound from the conservatism which he has taught for years to a radicalism which is entirely new to him," said Mr. Grant.

He also expressed it as his belief that the Harmon boom had fallen flat, and that Governor Wilson attitude savored more of political ambition rather than genuine conviction.

J. P. MORGAN DINES WITH A PRINCESS

ROME, March 25.—J. Pierpont Morgan has declined scores of invitations to all kinds of functions on the ground that he does not desire to overtax his strength. Two of them were accepted, however. One was a long motor ride with his sister, Mrs. Burns. The other was a dinner given by Princess Radziwell, where he met a select company of the Italian nobility, including Prince Albert Radziwell and his beautiful American wife, who was Dorothy Deacon. It is expected Mr. Morgan will leave Rome for Florence on Wednesday. It is believed he will have an audience with the Pope before leaving here.

TERRY, NOTED ACTOR OF ENGLAND, IS ILL

LONDON, March 25.—Edward Terry, the actor, is dangerously ill with neuritis at his home, Priory Lodge, Barnes, Surrey. Mr. Terry is sixty-eight years of age, having been born in 1844. He made his first appearance in London at the Surrey Theatre in 1877. He opened Terry's Theatre ten years later. He is a writer of distinction and a noted traveler.

2,500 QUIT LYNN SHOE SHOPS; MILL STRIKE IN LOWELL

Shoe Operatives Walk Out in Sympathy With Demands of Seventy McKay Stitchers; 1,800 Quit Looms at Lowell

More than 2,500 organized shoe workers struck in Lynn today, and about 1,800 cotton mill operatives quit work in Lowell.

The strike in Lynn was in sympathy with seventy McKay shoe stitchers who demand an increase of 2 cents on a dozen shoes. There was no violence at Lynn.

In Lowell the Appleton mills, employing 1,400, shut down entirely. Threats of violence, it was said, were made there, which caused many to quit. A force of twenty-five policemen was at the Appleton mills early today and later a police squad was placed at the entrance of each of the seven cotton mills of Lowell.

Twenty-two thousand hands may be affected by the strike in Lynn and 20,000 by that in Lowell.

TWENTY FACTORIES AFFECTED.

Twenty-one of the biggest factories in Lynn are affected. Fifteen factories granted the increase desired. The twenty factories from which the operatives were called out will be able to run only three or four days, it was said, without the withdrawn forces.

Then, unless the trouble is settled, it is possible that the whole shoe industry of Lynn may be tied up, affecting more than 20,000 operatives.

The strike was effected without any violence. The police were not called out. Most of the strikers went to their headquarters, where they discussed the situation.

The strike was called by the joint council of the United Shoe Workers of America. The chairman of this organization is James Gale. Charles O. Whidden was appointed to represent the organization and try to bring about a settlement of the differences between the McKay stitchers and their employers.

The McKay shoe stitchers want a straight increase of two cents per dozen shoes while the manufacturers have offered only about one cent increase. The offer to the stitchers which was refused was as follows:

Women's shoes, per dozen, 8 to 9 cents.
Misses' shoes, no increase.
Children's shoes, 6 to 7 cents.
Slippers, no increase.
Mens' shoes, 8 to 9 cents.
Boys' and youths' fractional increase.
Little gents', 6 to 7 cents.

The committee of manufacturers wants to compromise the trouble, it was reported. There will be a meeting of the McKay stitchers in Lasters' Hall tonight to consider the trouble. The impression gained among the strikers today was that the McKay stitchers would probably not favor a compromise.

The unions included in the strikers are Lasters, Lasting Machine, Packers, Levellers, Bottom Finishers, Stitchers, Button Hole Operators, Mixed Shoe Workers and McKay Stitchers.

The women strikers went to their headquarters at No. 10 Central square. The headquarters of the men are at Lasters' Hall.

Where Strikes Were Called.

The firms in which the strike was called are as follows:

C. H. Aborn & Co., Adams Shoe Company, Bolander & Beckman, C. H. Cobb, Dickinson Shoe Company, G. F. Daniels Company, John R. Donovan Company, A. D. Fisher, F. E. Gregory, A. Fisher & Son, D. T. Harney Company, How Shoe Company, Luther S. Johnson & Co., T. J. Kiely & Co., Leonard Shoe Company, Mitchell, Caunt & Co., Benjamin H. Newhall, Putnam & Croff, Seymour & Jackson, Tufts & Friedman, and the Thomson & Croker Shoe Co.

The following firms have granted the increase and are running full time:

Thomas H. Logan Company, Thomas & Tarr, Allen Foster & Willett, Peter J. Harney & Sons, Strout & Stritter, V. K. & A. H. Jones, Mark Worthley, Finnerty & Cassaboon, William Porter & Sons, Charles E. Blake & Co. and the Edward F. Logan & Co.

Four firms have a three-year arbitration agreement with the United Shoe Workers of America, which was made recently, and are not affected by the present strike. These firms are: James Phelan & Sons, A. N. Creighton & Co., Cotter Shoe Company and the Brophy Bros. Shoe Company.

No attempts were made today to picket the mills that are under the ban of the strikers. Should any attempt be made to employ strik-breakers that would precipitate a bitter battle.

Charles O. Whidden, selected to try to adjudicate the McKay stitchers' trouble, made this statement today to an AMERICAN reporter:

"I think that the trouble will be compromised and that in a few days all of the strikers will return to work."

1800 Quit at Lowell.

In Lowell today about 1,800 mill workers quit work because of their dissatisfaction with the raise of pay, a voluntary act on the part of the mills. This advance ranged from 4 to 14 per cent. and averaged more than 7 per cent.

About 300 operatives in the Merrimac Mills quit. While the trouble today caused but little excitement there was fear in the city lest the strike extend to the 20,000 or more operatives in the mills of Lowell.

Police squads were placed at the entrance of each of the seven mills before the noon hour.

Firemen's Demands.

The Stationary Firemen's Union sent a communication to the Cotton Manufacturers' Association today demanding that the wages of firemen be increased to 22 cents per hour. Further it asked that a reply be made before Wednesday night.

The union firemen, of whom there are about 400, now receive from 10 to 16 cents per hour, and they work on an average of eighty-four hours per week. International officers were expected at Fall River today to look into the situation. A mass meeting of the firemen has been called for Thursday night to take action on the manufacturers' reply.

In New Bedford negotiations are on for the settlement of the difficulties there. The mill hands refused to accept the 5 per cent. raise offered by the mill owners, demanding 10 per cent.

At Clinton, where 2,300 operatives of the Lancaster mills are on strike, the Bigelow Carpet Company voluntarily posted notice of an increase in wages which will add $1,000 to the weekly pay roll.

BUTT AWAITS POPE'S LETTER TO TAFT

ROME, March 25.—In order to wait for a letter that the Pope is preparing to send President Taft, Major Archibald Butts, military aid to the American Chief Executive, has deferred his departure from Rome until tomorrow.

IVERNIA HERE, FOUR DAYS LATE

The big Cunard liner Ivernia, which was due last Thursday, arrived in port today and was docked at 10:30, four days late. The Ivernia left Liverpool a day late and on the second day out ran into a severe storm which kept with them throughout the rest of the voyage. Last Friday the captain had to put into Halifax to get more coal in the bunkers to finish the run to this port.

On the nineteenth, the steerage passengers were thrown into a state of excitement when one of their number, John Pinder, twenty-seven years old, who was accompanied by his little son, developed a suicidal mania and tried to cut his throat. Pinder is confined to the hospital on the ship. The boy will be deported with his father next week and will go back to his home in England.

Pinder has a brother named Robert living in Westboro, whom the immigration officials have notified of the attempted suicide.

The Ivernia brought in twenty-three saloon, 360 second cabin and 1,030 steerage passengers.

ROOSEVELT SAYS HE'LL WIN INDIANA

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., March 25.—Colonel Roosevelt expressed the belief that he would defeat President Taft with primaries held to select delegates from Indiana to the Chicago convention.

"I feel extremely hopeful over the Indiana situation," said the ex-President. "Private advices that I have received indicate that we will have more than a majority of the delegates from that State."

TWO INJURED AT FORE RIVER YARDS

Thomas Walsh of Quincy and Harry Holmes of Dorchester were injured while working at the Fore River Shipbuilding Yards, Quincy, to-day. Walsh received a fracture of the right leg while at work on a buzz saw and Holmes was bruised about the head by the falling of a steel plate. Walsh was taken to the Grace Hospital and Holmes was able to go to his home unassisted.

HOT CAMPAIGN HITS BAY STATE

Massachusetts today woke up to find itself in the midst of the great presidential campaign. The first skirmishes take place at the presidential preference primaries on April 30. Campaign managers for Champ Clark and Wilson in the Democratic camp, and for Roosevelt and Taft in the Republican side announced that State-wide rallies will be held to urge voters to elect to the national party conventions delegates pledged to their presidential candidates.

Papers have already been taken out at the office of Secretary of State for the nomination of Taft, Roosevelt and La Follette on the Republican side and Governor Foss, Champ Clark and Wilson on the Democratic end. So far nomination papers have not been asked for Congressman Underhill and Governor Harmon, nor for William Jennings Bryan.

The various forces are lining up for the fray and plans of campaigns are being formulated at the rival headquarters. Among the first to get started with a State wide sweep of stump speakers will be the Champ Clark forces, who will start the ball rolling in earnest style to corral delegates for the Speaker of the National House of Representatives.

G. F. Williams In Charge.

George Fred Williams is in charge of the Clark campaign in Massachusetts and he is planning to put a big corps of orators and workers into the field to cover every important city and town in the State.

The Roosevelt campaign, which will be put into action under the direction of former District Attorney Arthur D. Hill and Councillor Mathew Hale, will fire their opening gun on April 2. Things have been rather busy at the Roosevelt headquarters the past few days where they were making their selections of delegates at large and alternates.

The following selection was finally decided upon.

Delegates-at-Large.

Charles S. Baxter of Medford.
George W. Coleman of Boston.
Frederick Fosdick of Fitchburg.
Albert Bushnell Hart of Cambridge.
Octave A. La Riviere of Springfield.
James P. Magenis of Boston.
Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill.
Alvin G. Weeks of Fall River.

Alternates-at-Large.

Charles L. Burrill of Boston.
Thomas F. Doherty of Boston.
Richard R. Flynn of Somerville.
John Larabee of Melrose.
John G. Maxfield of Springfield.
Max Mitchell of Boston.
Rev. Cassius A. Ward of Boston.
Russell A. Wood of Cambridge.

The Taft campaign in this State has former Governor John D. Long as the head of the committee, but General Edgar D. Champlin is the active head of the movement and has his headquarters opened at Young's Hotel, where he has a large force of workers, including a press agent, on the job.

The Taft forces do not intend to let the Roosevelt boomers get any start on them and will begin active campaign work soon after the first of April.

PULMOTOR REVIVES CHICAGO GAS VICTIM

CHICAGO, March 25.—Dr. James W. Fowler, a dentist, was overcome by gas in his office and was revived with the pulmotor of the Commonwealth-Edison Company. When the police, who were notified by Miss Susan Fowler, the dentist's sister, arrived at the office, they had to break into the room before they could reach the unconscious man. Gas was escaping from a leaking connection on a stove. The pulmotor was called for, and after working over Dr. Fowler a few moments he was revived. Later he was removed to a hospital. He is reported out of danger.

CONNECTICUT MILLS GIVE WAGE RAISE

TAFTVILLE, Ct., March 25.—Nearly 7,000 mill operators in Connecticut have received notification of increases in wages of 5 per cent. and up. Fifteen hundred hands in the Taftville cotton mills will on April 1 work under a new sliding scale of wages, the minimum increase of which will be 5 per cent. Others which will grant increases are the Attawaugan, Ballouville and Pineville mills at Attawaugan, the North Gresvenordale Mills, and the Killingly and Plainville mills.

LAKEPORT MAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN

LAKEPORT, N. H., March 25.—Alvin J. Abbott, twenty-seven years old, cashier at the Boston & Maine station in this town, was killed instantly at 8:27 a. m. today by being run over by a freight train. He was on his way to the office and attempted to jump on a passing freight train. He missed his footing and fell, the wheels passing over his chest. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias and also of a railroad order. He leaves a wife, young child and a brother who lives in Boston.

MUST DROP RATE ON CATTLE SHIPMENT

WASHINGTON, March 25.—After an investigation lasting for nearly two years the Interstate Commerce Commission today denied to all roads operating throughout the West to Mississippi points and beyond the right to make an advance of 33 1-3 per cent. in rates on cattle and sheep. This is one of the most important decisions handed down by the Interstate Commerce Commission within the present year. Roads are ordered to cancel such proposed advances by April 15.

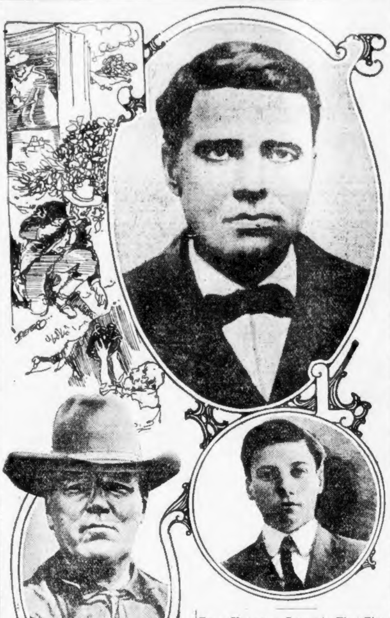
Allens Take Desperate Stand

Each Outlaw Off For Himself

PRINCIPAL MEMBERS OF THE ALLEN FAMILY



Upper picture shows Sidna Allen, leader of the outlaws; small picture at right is Fred Allen, for whose capture a reward of $1,000 is offered; small picture at left is "Jack" Allen, a non-combatant, who is said to have induced Sidna Edwards to surrender.

Four Clansmen Separate First Time Since Shooting in Court Room.

HILLSVILLE, Va., March 25.—Hard-pressed by the mountaineer scouts who have been pursuing them, the four outlaw Allens in the mountain wilds have taken a desperate stand. They have separated for the first time, it is believed, since they shot and killed five persons in the courthouse here, and started off, each man for himself.

The big posse, which has been after them, learned of this and has likewise split up, going off in small parties of two and three, with some of the best woodsmen and sharpshooters traveling alone.

Strong Line of Pickets.

While the manhunt for fugitive members of the Allen gang went on in the mountains today seventy witnesses were summoned to appear before the Grand Jury here on Wednesday. New indictments will be returned charging the outlaws with the murder of Juror A. C. Fowler, who has died since the first indictments were returned. These witnesses include the survivors of the terrible shooting affray that snuffed out the entire legal machinery of Carroll County.

Baldwin who has been in command of a body of scouts at Mount Airy, N. C., working North, has changed his base and set out at the head of a mounted posse from Hillsville. He reported that he had left so strong a line of pickets along the North Carolina boundary that it was perfectly safe for him to leave there.

It is believed that Sidna Allen, the fighting leader of the party, consisting of himself and his nephews, Claude Allen, Friel Allen and Welley Edwards, may strike out for some distant big city.

Boys Might Escape Chair.

He was in the habit of carrying about with him large sums of money, sometimes as much as a thousand dollars. He had nearly this much, his acquaintances say, on the day of the shooting. Also he was accustomed to travel and the ways of cities, and would not be likely to reveal himself as a backwoodsman. He would not be averse to leaving the others because they are not so deeply involved in the killing as he. Against him there is positive evidence that he shot Judge Massie, who had just sentenced his brother Floyd and thereby shattered the boast of the Allen clan that no court ever dared put one of them in jail.

While it is known that the young boys fired several shots, no one can swear that any of their bullets killed any of the victims, and therefore, they might escape the electric chair.

CITY HALL NOTES

In political circles the rumor prevails that Mayor Fitzgerald may oust Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph A. Campbell, brother of the clerk of the Superior Civil Court, who has shied his hat into the ring as a den to Lomasney and his followers. Attorney Campbell was appointed to the law department by the late Mayor Hibbard, and has been recently mentioned as in line for promotion.

Colonel Dick Field, who is the Archie Butt of the Fitzgerald administration, has supreme confidence in the ability of his chief as a vote-getter. The colonel today wagered two $5 hats that his boss will lead the poll of the delegates-at-large in the presidential primary.

Louis K. Rourke, commissioner of public works, has reason to believe that the army of unemployed is as large as ever in its history. He has received more than 200 applications from those who anticipate that he will be obliged to hire a big force to carry out the $2,000,000 garbage contract. As a matter of fact all the necessary employes are supplied by the contractors, and they have not yet established offices in Boston.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George A. Flynn is making a strenuous effort to land the position of first assistant in the office, but it is understood that James A. Devlin, special counsel for the law department on legislative matters, has the pole in the race for the $6,000 plum.

Credit for the additional $50,000 for the new Mt. Ida playground on Meeting House Hill, which was sent to the City Council today, goes largely to Mgr. Peter Ronan, whose able presentation of the desires of the district led to the granting of the additional sum. If the appropriation is passed it will make $100,000 that is available for the new park, which is expected to be the finest located in the country, if not in the world.

Consumption Often Develops From Pneumonia

Consumption readily attacks those who have had Pneumonia. Many sufferers from Tuberculosis give a history of having had Pneumonia. The lungs thus weakened are more easily attacked by the germs that cause Consumption.

For all those with "weak lungs," especially those who have had Pneumonia, Eckman's Alterative is the appropriate remedy. Cures of Consumption are accomplished by Eckman's Alterative. But take it in time. There is no wisdom in waiting until Tuberculosis is established. Health is never fully valued until sickness comes. A remarkable recovery follows:

336 N. 41st St., Phila., Pa.

"Gentlemen: I wish I had known of Eckman's Alterative two years ago. Since taking it, following a bad attack of Pneumonia, I have gained twenty-eight pounds, and I cannot but be very thankful to you and the Almighty God for the great blessing and change of health it has brought me."

(Signed Affidavit) THOMAS REILLY.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever; Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habitforming drugs. For sale by all Riker-Jaynes Stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept., and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

Thousands Killed

Germs of Catarrh Easily Destroyed and Vile Disease Ended

Delays are dangerous. If you want to get rid of catarrh you must kill the germs that cause catarrh. Stomach dosing, ointments, sprays and douches have all failed.

HYOMEI (pronounce it High-o-me) is breathed directly over the inflamed sore, germ-infested membrane, not only destroying the microbes, but healing and soothing the sore catarrhal spots.

Breathe HYOMEI for catarrh, coughs, colds, croup and catarrhal deafness and if you are not satisfied with the benefit obtained your money will be refunded.

Breathe HYOMEI; it is made of purest Eucalyptus and other healing antiseptics. It does not contain cocaine or any injurious drugs. Complete outfit, including hard rubber pocket inhaler and bottle of HYOMEI, $1.00, at pharmacists everywhere.

NEWSBOYS' ICE FETE TONIGHT

Don't expect to buy a paper from a newsboy after 7:30 or so tonight.

The "newsies" will all be at the Boston Arena on St. Botolph street.

It is the newsboys' "Big Night," the night of the grand ice carnival and skating races arranged for the young paper venders of the city by the AMERICAN.

And, take it from the newsboys, this is to be "some carnival." There have been carnivals of professional skaters at the big Arena on St. Botolph street. There have been red-hot hockey matches. There have been exclusive society functions (the Back Bay Set y'know). But this is the first newsboys' ice carnival the Arena has ever known—or any other place so far as recorded.

It is to be the "Extra" edition of the ice carnival business and like all extras, it is to be a hummer.

The first event on the program will be called at 8 o'clock and the carnival should wind up by 10 o'clock. That will take fast work, however, as there are 200 entries.

Through an arrangement made by the AMERICAN the price of tickets for the public has been placed at twenty-five cents. This will include a seat, up to the seating capacity of the Arena.

A special feature is a push ball match between two newsboy teams of twelve boys each.

Another novelty will be the paper race, never before seen on the ice. A fox chase will also be a new and entertaining diversion.

The special race to decide the amateur championship, will be a fast event. The entries include Murch, Richenburg and Danahy of Boston and Rickson of Springfield. These are four of the fastest amateurs in New England. They will put up a spirited battle for the medal and the glory.

Six teams are entered for the newsboys' special relay race. This will be one of the big events of the meet. Two skaters will be allowed on a team, with gold medal prizes for the winners.

There has been added to the card a match race between five of the cleverest girl skaters in Greater Boston. The entries include Dolly Pedersen of Boston, Agnes and Frances Seamans of Somerville, Belle Boyd of Dorchester and Alice Desmond of Dorchester.

Other features include Gordon Thompson, jumping for distance on skates; William F. Merritt, fox chase; Ernest Dutton, clown; Jimmy Walsh, world's champion bantam weight is to act as a starter.

Another feature, adding greatly to the sporting interest of the carnival, will be a match race between two noted men skaters.

The program of ice events includes:

One-quarter mile, boys ten to twelve years old; three prizes, gold, silver and bronze medals.

One-quarter mile, boys twelve to fourteen years old; three prizes, gold, silver and bronze medals.

One-quarter mile, boys sixteen to eighteen years old; three prizes, gold, silver and bronze medals.

One-quarter mile, boys eighteen to twenty years old; three prizes, gold, silver and bronze medals.

Special relay race, teams of two boys each, for two gold medals.

Special race, free-for-all, newsboys' championship, for the gold medal awarded to Greater Boston newsboy champion.

Hockey, Newsboys vs. picked team.
Men's amateur championship race.
Men's exhibition race.
Girls match race.
Push ball match (newsboy teams).
Paper race (new).
Fox chase (new).

THE GREAT MYSTERY PLAY AT TECHNOLOGY: "WHO IS MR. SMITH?"

This being the season for college theatricals, the following scenario (?) is suggested for the benefit of the theatrical talent of Massachusetts Institute of Technology:

"SMITH,"
A Mystery Play in One Act.
Cast:

"Smith"—The Unknown Donor.

Plot—Dr. Richard C. Maclaurin, President of "Tech," jocosely says the name of the mysterious giver of $2,500,000 to "Tech" is named "Smith." The mystery remains — who is "Smith?"

The plot of this play will be to show "Smith's" real name.

"Tech" playwrights and musical comedy carpenters may take this free suggestion and go as far as they like with it.

Preach Good Sermons and Get Good Milk

This Is Harvard Professor's Advice to the Congregational Ministers.

Professor T. N. Carver of Harvard University told the Congregational ministers today at their meeting in Pilgrim Hall that if they want to reduce the cost of living they should preach better sermons to the farmers.

"We are all agreed that the religion of the present day must perform its functions in the line of social service," said Professor Carver.

"If we desire to reduce the cost of living the minister should preach such sermons to the farmers so as to impress them with the importance of getting more and better results out of the land. Ministers should preach such sermons to the mechanic that will make him use his talents to a better advantage in making better machines.

"Ministers should try to make the milk better. They can do this by preaching that kind of sermon which will influence the farmer to produce the best kind of milk.

"All this applies to social service. When the employer gets religion he begins to show it in the management of his business."

SAFES BLOWN AT ROCHDALE MILLS BY TWO ROBBERS

ROCHDALE, March 25.—Two robbers, equipped with a set of tools evidently stolen from a shanty on the Boston & Albany road, and a quantity of nitroglycerine, blew open the safes at the Comins mill and the Howarth mill, which were recently purchased by the American Woolen Company.

They got away with $50 in cash from the Comins mill safe and a much larger amount from the safe of the American Woolen Company. Just how much was taken from the American Woolen Company was not given out, but it was learned that a considerable sum was in the safe.

PEACE FAILS IN BRITISH STRIKE

LONDON, March 25.—The conference at the Foreign Office, called to settle the coal strike, adjourned after a brief session with the announcement that no settlement had been reached. Then the cabinet went into special session, taking up its consideration of the situation where it had been left off at an extraordinary session in the residence of Chancellor David Lloyd-George and which did not break up until midnight.

Premier Asquith had been hastily summoned from Salisbury, where he went to spend the week-end, by several of his colleagues, who were in close touch with leaders on both sides. It was reported that they were considering a suggestion from King George to revise the government program.

MORSE CONSULTS POPE'S PHYSICIAN

ROME, March 25.—Charles W. Morse of New York, who was recently released from the Atlanta Penitentiary, is in Rome. He is travelling incognito and is accompanied by his wife. Mr. Morse went to see a Charles A. Moore, who has not been definitely identified. Mr. Moore says Morse is secretive as to his future plans. He is depressed in spirit, pale in appearance and limps badly when he walks. He consulted Professor Marchiafava, one of the Pope's physicians, whose treatment he proposes to follow.

BOSTON FOR MEDICAL CURB ON MARRIAGE

Boston ministers, physicians and social workers today declared their approval and indorsement of the refusal of Bishop C. P. Anderson of Chicago to marry any person without a medical certificate showing them to free from any incurable disease. A number of Boston people interviewed today declared that they believed that this regulation should be made into law by the civil authorities rather than to be of use and enforceable instead of by edict of any one church or minister.

Here is the edict by Bishop Anderson, the Episcopal Bishop of Chicago:

"Beginning with Easter, no persons will be married at the Cathedral unless they present a certificate of health from a reputable physician to the effect that they are normal, physically and mentally, and have neither an incurable or communicable disease."

Here is what Boston people said today of this edict:

PRESIDENT MURLIN FAVORS PLAN.

By LEMUEL H. MURLIN, President of Boston University.

That is a step in the direction of one of the reforms most needed and most desirable today. I suppose there is more or less doubt whether this can be made to work as planend. But is seems perfectly feasible, and the example set by such an influential church should have a weighty effect in putting up a standard for those desiring to be married.

While I have given this general subject no great amount of study, I believe it is a thing generally admitted that persons physically unfit should be restrained, or prevented, from entering the married state. This plan is a step in that direction, and so I believe it is an excellent thing.

Against Snap Judgment.

By ARCHDEACON SAMUEL G. BABCOCK of the Episcopal Church of Massachusetts.

While believing that some action should be taken in reference to this matter restricting marriages, it is inexpedient that it should come about in the way suggested by the Episcopal Bishop of Chicago.

If people cannot get married at the Chicago Cathedral, they can go around the corner to some other Episcopal church and be married. This restriction does not appear in the canons of the Episcopal church and it seems to me that it should receive serious consideration before it should be made a law.

If the different State legislatures take up this restriction and make it a law it seems to me that it would be better for it to come from the civil authorities than from the church to take the initiative. While the church should indorse the proposition and aim in every way to advance it, yet the law should come from the State and not from the church.

I should doubt very much the expediency of making such a law, however, without much deliberation. While it might correct evil in one way, it also might give an oportunity to increase it in another.

We must not have snap judgment on such an important subject. Let us give it careful consideration and then let all the churches put up a larger scheme what to do.

Sees Need in Massachusetts.

By Dr. Emma H. Wholley, one of the leading advocates of restrictive legislation in Massachusetts.

That man has my heartfelt admiration—and my heartfelt sympathy. He's a grand, good man—but he will be abused and reviled, and be a regular martyr.

There is a law we need in Massachusetts worse than any one who has not studied the statistics can imagine. It is needed to protect our women—our pure women. If this law would pass, it would abolish 50 per cent. of the sickness of the world and drive half our doctors out of business.

Not for the Clergy.

Rev. Dillon Bronson, D. D., district superintendent of the Methodist district in Boston:

This matter of who is and who is not physically able to enter the married state is not, in my opinion, one in which the clergy should take a hand. It is for the Legislatures of the different States to attend to such matters, which are, after all, legislative functions. Ministers may, and should be, interested. But it is for the State Legislatures, with the advice and cooperation of the medical fraternity, to work out the problem.

The Clergy's Position.

By Rev. Frank W. Collier of the Stoneham Methodist Church, a leading student of Eugenics.

I think this is a thing the clergy should not enter into actively. It is for the medical fraternity to come out in more strength than they have heretofore. In my opinion, they have been somewhat laggard. But the clergy should wait for the Legislatures to fix rules governing marriage, as I believe that State Legislatures in some States have done already.

Slowly Dying, Grace Now Flatly Accuses Wife

Says She Tried to Kill Him for Insurance Money

TWO NEW PICTURES OF MRS. DAISY GRACE—ONE WITH HER BLIND SON; THE OTHER WITH HER MOTHER.

Wife Returns to Atlanta to Face Charges and Dodges Army of Reporters.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 25.—Slowly dying at his mother's home in Newman, Eugene Grace, in the first interview he has given out since the shooting, accuses his wife, Daisy, of firing the shot which is bringing him to the grave.

"I married my wife because I loved her. Her money was of no consideration to me," said Grace.

"I came to myself about 7 o'clock that morning," he explained. "I was dazed. I didn't know what was the trouble. I thought I must be ill. But the moment I became conscious. I smelt the sulphury fumes of powder smoke. In a little while I realized that she had shot me.

I asked her to go for a doctor. I begged her to go, but she delayed in the room. She fixed her hat and her dress, but she stayed and all the time I lay there fearing I was dying.

"'Telephone,' I said to her; 'there's the 'phone; telephone, for God's sake; there may be time yet.'

"Then she said, 'No,' she would go for the doctor. She arranged her hat, walked from the room and locked the door, leaving me there to die. Then she took a train to Newman to my mother's home.

"I have been absolutely on the level with everybody. Much has been printed about me that is untrue; the charges of infidelity and the suggestion of another woman are all lies—lies.

The story that I took $20,000 from her is unfounded as any fabrication could be. The theory that I knew another woman and that her hand wounded me is without a shadow of truth. My wife's mother has written dreadful things concerning me, but they are woven from her brain. They are not facts.

"Why, I never saw her but three times, and the truth is that she and her daughter feel bitterly toward each other. For four years they didn't speak because of a disagreement over a will."

"Do you think she shot you for your insurance money?"

He nodded his head. "I do," he said. "I wanted to makes these policies payable to my estate, but she insisted that she should be the beneficiary and she prevailed upon me to make them payable to her."

Didn't See Her Shoot.

"You did not see her shoot you?" he was asked.

"No, I merely woke, dazed, and with the pain in my chest. That made me first think I had acute indigestion. But as soon as I smelled the smoke of the powder. I knew she had shot me and when I begged her to get a doctor she refused, then locked me in alone and helpless. I knew she had left me to die, to die, while she went to my mother's home."

After lying back on the pillow, he explained how he came to write the letter that was mailed to Mrs. Grace at Newman, but fell into the hands of Grace's family.

"On Sunday, she suggested that I might get left. 'Suppose you write a letter to me,' she said in fun, as I thought, 'and explain that you have been delayed in going to Philadelphia. Let's do it, just for fun.' I did, merely to please her. I thought that she would tear it up. I didn't dream the dreadful way she meant to use it.

No other woman and no other man had any hand in shooting me. My wife did it. I would say that if I stood this minute before God.

WESTWOOD HITS ELECTRIC LINE

The people of the exclusive suburb of Westwood today struck back at the Dedham and Franklin street railway, which suddenly marooned the town a few months ago by cutting off its trolley line connections. The citizens of the town ask the court to appoint a receiver for the road, and that the court order the trolley line to Westwood started again.

In 1898 this road agreed to give the Westwood people full service, the fare from Westwood to Dedham to be five cents. Last year the fare was raised to ten cents and the case was brought to court, the verdict being against the road, compelling them to charge but five cents each way. In January last the road suspended operation and the Westwood people have experienced great difficulty in getting to and from Boston.

The children who attend the Dedham High School from Westwood have been carried back and forth to school by a farmer, but he has announced that on April 1 he will confine himself to his farm. How they will get to school is now a question.

WILSON'S QUIBBLING SPURS POLESTO ACT

NEW YORK, March 25.—Tired with the quibbling of Governor Woodrow Wilson about making a proper retraction after admitting he had made a mistake in his attack upon the Poles as a race, the United Polish Societies henceforth will take an active part in opposing his nomination by the Democratic party.

On January 21, nearly sixty days ago, the United Polish Societies of South Brooklyn, after reading the slander on Polish immigrants as expressed in Volume V. of Governor Wilson's History of the American People, adopted resolutions opposing his candidacy.

His comparison of these immigrants with the Chinese to the detriment of the former aroused the indignation of a race of people who had given to America patriots of the stamp of the immortal Pulaski and Kosciusko.

With the fairness that has marked the Polish race, the societies in adopting resolutions against Governor Wilson's candidacy because of his written opinion were willing to withdraw their opposition if he would withdraw the objectionable paragraphs reflecting on their countrymen.

This did not mean that they would be for Governor Wilson, but that they would not be against him upon that ground. It meant that each individual Pole would weigh his candidacy irrespective of his insult to the race. So far as the Poles of the country are concerned, the situation would be as though he never had penned the offensive paragraph. It was, in effect, an offer to accept an apology.

The resolutions, as adopted, were sent to the Governor, and after some delay, more perhaps than was necessary, Governor Wilson replied to the following communication:

Brooklyn, Feb. 2, 1912.

Hon. Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey:

Honorable and Dear Sir—I have the honor of forwarding to you a copy of resolutions which have been acted on at a meeting of the Polish citizens of South Brooklyn, N. Y., held January 21, 1912. The motive which actuated the passing of these resolutions is a feeling of injury and resentment at your opinion concerning Polish immigrants, as expressed in the fifth volume of your History of the American People.

Since a copy of these resolutions has been given to the public press, it is also very probable that any answer which you might kindly give to this communication will be diverted into the same channel.

Hoping that you will understand that the action as taken by the Polish citizens is not one of animosity against your person, but only a firm stand for what we consider a principle, we remain, with expressions of respect,

UNITED POLISH SOCIETIES
OF SOUTH BROOKLYN.
Per F. Ig Drobinski.

Governor Wilson's Reply.

Governor Wilson's reply to Dr. Drobinski's communication was as follows:

State of New Jersey,
Executive Department,
February 7, 1912.

My Dear Drobinski:

Your courteous letter of February 2 does you honor. I wish to thank you for it very warmly and to say that I respond with pleasure. I do not believe that the passage in my history to which you refer, if read with full context, can possibly be interpreted as an attack upon the Polish people or upon those fine Polish elements which have added strength to the already large variety of American life. I yield to no one in my admiration of the Polish character. I have received the greatest stimulus from my reading of Polish history. If my terms were too sweeping, they must be attributed to my clumsiness in expressing myself.

What was in my thought was only a reference to some lawless elements which had recently been added to our population, by drawing from the proper sort certainly not from the great sound body of a people which like all others has its lawless elements.

I was simply pointing out the coming to America of those elements out of several countries which the several countries themselves might be supposed to be glad to get rid of. If I did not speak of the fine elements which had also come, it was only because I thought that everybody would take that for granted.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

This letter on the part of the Governor of New Jersey was read to the Polish societies on February 23, and on the 29th Dr. Robinski, for the United Polish societies, replied as follows:

Honorable Sir:

At a meeting of the delegates of the Polish societies of South Brooklyn, held on February 23, I had the honor of reading your communication bearing the date of seventh inst.

The assembly expressed its appreciation of the kindness of tone and breadth of view that characterized your letter. However, while judging from your letter that you are on the right road yourself, in the estimate of the Polish character, still it was felt that you have sent the readers of your volumes on the wrong path. Something, it was thought, should in fairness be done by you to return your misguided readers to the proper way of measuring Polish immigrants, who in the main have been a welcome addition to the social life of America.

An erratum slip in the yet unsold volumes, promise to bring your meaning out of the cloud of obscurity, and this in the next edition, a statement to the public press, these are the means that, if taken, will, I believe, bring you friends and well-wishers from the Polish peoples.

Letters, because of the economy of writing, are not the best methods of conveying one's impressions; consequently, if your excellency thinks it advisable and wishes to appoint the time, a committee from the Polish societies of Brooklyn will wait on you and discuss and adjust the matter satisfactorily.

Awaiting your kind answer, believe us to be, Honorable Governor,

Respectfully yours,
UNITED POLISH SOCIETIES
OF SOUTH BROOKLYN.

This letter was signed by Dr. Robinski.

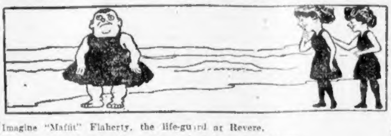
SKIRT AND FLOUNCE

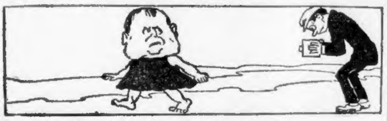
By MORTON BIRGE

Dispatches fresh from Cleveland with modesty announce
That bathing suits for horrid man must sport a skirt and flounce.
If Cleveland's example be adopted here we'll get
Some sights at Boston beaches that will startle us, you bet.



Imagine "Maffit" Flaherty, the life-guard at Revere,
Whose statuesque proportions are admired from far and near.
Imagine hefty "Maffit"—he's 200 if an ounce—
With bathing suit extended by a little skirt and flounce.

When "Fitzy" was in Florida he charmed 'em at Palm Beach
The Boston bathing Mayor was admittedly a peach,
But even "Fitzy's" savoir faire would get a sudden jounce
If they put on his bathing suit a little skirt and flounce.



But some of those Apollos (?) at Nantasket and Revere,
Who strut about as though to say: "Behold, just look who's here!"
Those chaps who think their very glance makes hearts of maidens bounce—
It wouldn't be a bad idea to give 'em skirt and flounce.

Roosevelt Fails to Get Those Pajamas

Colonel Roosevelt hadn't connected today with those pink pajamas he lost in Boston during the excitement Saturday morning.

The ex-President had just twenty-six minutes to get to the North Station and start for Portland. He forgot the pajamas. The Pullman porter sent them to the Roosevelt headquarters down on State street. Tenderly they were packed up and expressed to the Colonel (Hale, son of United States Senator Hale, not Roosevelt) up at Portland, but alas, they arrived too late. The Colonel (Roosevelt, not Hale) had delivered his speech, and skipped back to Oyster Bay.

Colonel Hale expressed them to Oyster Bay, but the Colonel (Roosevelt, not Hale) is in New York today and starts at once on his Western trip. So the pajamas, after these particularly trying experiences for any self-respecting pajamas, must lie in wait for the Colonel until he return hence to Oyster Bay.

P. S.—Colonel Desmond (it is certainly hard to keep all the Roosevelt campaign colonels distinct) in charge of the Massachusetts Roosevelt headquarters and official caretaker of the Roosevelt pajamas during their flight through Boston, issued this statement today:

"The report that Colonel Roosevelt wears pink pajamas is untrue and malicious and—well, and all the usual Rooseveltian terms. The pajamas, when I saw them, were of cream color with a delicate pink stripe running through them."

And the doors of the Ananias Club opened wide to admit a new member.

DEATH THREATS TO DR. JOHNSON

Inspectors from police headquarters today, after a conference with the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, with relation to the information he declared he has received of an attempt to murder him tomorrow night in his home, began a search through the South End for the characters involved in the plot.

Mr. Johnson has been warned that a reward of $200 each was offered to at least three men if they would enter his home, "stick a knife into him" and then loot his house. The booty was to be divided between themselves, according to the information received by the pastor.

Mr. Johnson lives at No. 67 Bay State road. He declared that he would rely upon a shotgun loaded with pepper and salt and kept handy beside his bed, as a defence. However, the police took up the case today.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson told of the threats which he has received, in the course of his sermon on the topic, "Remember the Maine," with patriotism as his theme.

He contrasted the good patriots of the country with men who were living, he said, upon sinful gain derived from maintaining objectionable hotels.

BANDITS FLEE WITH FORTUNE

PARIS, March 25.—Three daring automobile bandits who have been holding the community about this city in a grip of terror for weeks made a raid on the bank of the Societe Generale in Chantilly today, killed two watchmen, dynamited the vaults and escaped in a high-power automobile with loot estimated at several hundred thousand francs.

The holdup was one of the most sensational in the criminal annals of France and lacked none of the details that made United States of America so notorious a [illegible] ago.

Earlier in the day three robbers, believed to be the same men, held up an automobile just outside this city, killing the chauffeur when he showed signs of resistance.

The road agents sped away in their daring car after they had rifled the pockets of the chauffeur and others in the car.

So daring and well laid were the bandits' plans and with such coolness and nerve were they carried out that the men created but little alarm by their wholesale use of firearms and spilling of blood.

It is believed that the robbers fled to this city and are now in hiding. Every gendarme and policeman and many secret agents of the government are employed in a dragnet search that is being made of every section.

"Hobble" Skirt Gives Way to the "Panier"

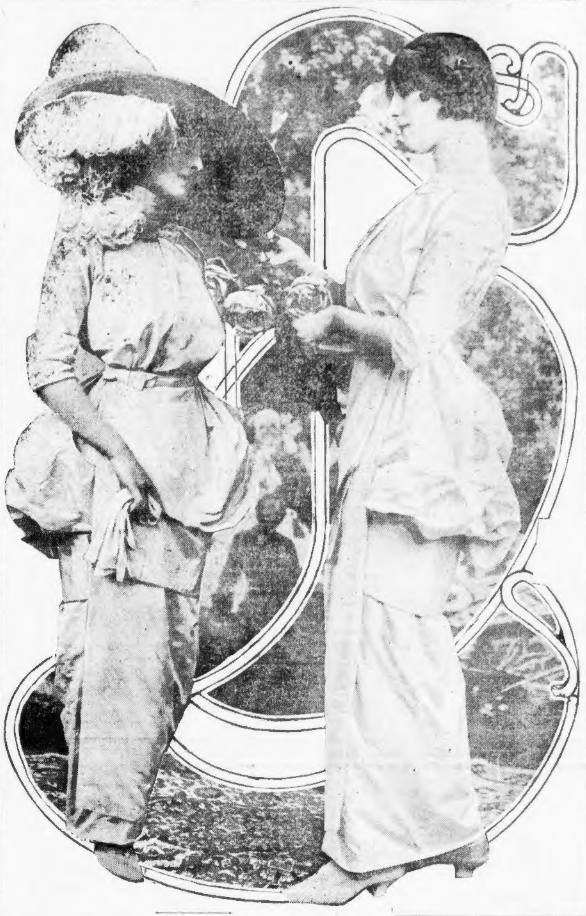
Models Reveal Fashion's Latest Decree

"BALLOON PANIERS" AS SHOWN BY MODELS IN LONDON DRESSMAKERS' CONVENTION



NEW GOWN FROM DRESSMAKERS' MEETING CONCEALS LINES OF THE FIGURES.

LONDON, March 25.—Society women who balked at the hobble skirt are gasping with scarcely less intense emotion at its successor, the bunched-out panier skirt shown on living models at a dressmaker's opening in Dover street.

One of the models wore a beautiful dress of soft rose-colored taffeta, made quite simply, except for the "balloon" paniers, which were further accentuated by a plain band underneath.

The folded bodice was drawn into the waist with a narrow band of the same material, piped with white, and the little collar was of real lace.

The hat worn with this gown was of mauve, toning with the rose, and with shaded feathers.

All sorts of bewildered or astonished comments have been made by the men of fashion who have seen the hobble skirt's successor. Some of them say it reminds them of the pictures of the bodiced and paniered skirts worn in England in the days of Queen Elizabeth.

Experts say the new skirt conceals the lines of the figure so provokingly that it would be hard to guess, with a scales, within fifty pounds of the actual weight of the wearer.

LETTER CLEW IN BOMB CASE

NEW YORK, March 25.—Through the threatening letter sent to De Lancey Nicoll the police believe they have obtained a clew which will lead to the apprehension of the criminal manufacturer of the two infernal machines mailed to Judge Otto A. Rosalsky.

Mr. Nicoll said further to an AMERICAN reporter that the letter was perfectly coherent, and was written evidently by an educated person possessing an excellent command of the English language. He said he was sure the letter had no connection with the Brandt case. He dismissed a query concerning the "reference made to a long prison sentence imposed when I was District Attorney" by the brief statement that he hadn't the slightest idea as to who might have sent the letter."

Red Sox Get Two-Hour Workout

Little Time Left for Practice

By H. B. SCHULTZ.

Special American Correspondent with the Red Sox.

HARLEIGH B SCHULTZ

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 25.—A bright sun and clear skies freshened up the players today and lagging spirits in the training camp took on new vigor. After a lay-off since last Wednesday, due to the bad weather, the Red Sox sprinted to the Majestic Grounds this morning and warmed up quickly under the combined influence of the sunshine and exercise.

The forenoon workout lasted more than two hours. The practice included general batting and fielding practice. The outfield was a problem during the forenoon hours, due to the muddy condition of the soil. The infield was in fair shape.

A game is on this afternoon between the Regulars and the Yannigans, and this will be played unless the outfield proves forbidding. The Red Sox have been challenged by the Denver lads in town to a game or series of games, but Manager Stahl says "nay" to the proposition, as he is bent on using every minute this week to get his team into fit condition.

SUNSHINE ROUTS THE GLOOMS.

The threatened fair spell has everybody going. Successively heavy rain, thunder storm, sleet and snow, with the thermometer ranging down close to a freezing point, has been the daily program and for that reason the peek the sun took at the town routed out the gloom and this morning the joys are in posession.

"I can find but one comforting thought," said President McAleer, "and this is that the rains have been falling impartially all over the South. It is a toss-up as to which camp had the best of it. They have all suffered alike. All the big league teams will start the season on equal terms, none having the advantage over the other for opportunities of real workouts.

"Everywhere it has been too wet or too cold for training purposes. Certainly, if this sort of weather is to develop champions, there will be plenty of contestants in the field. The wet man hasn't been playing favorites with any of us."

Jake Stahl says he is anxious to make every day count for putting his team in playing condition, but seven days remain for practice, with a chance that several of these may have to go into the debit column because of wet.

Only a Few More Days For Team to Train.

"A good week would be a Godsend to us," said the manager. "We need all the sunshine we can get, and will have to spend every minute we can with profit. If we are not disappointed, I expect the team to be shipshape for our exhibition games next week before going home."

The only thing possible to do since the middle of last week has been to walk. Twenty-seven went out yesterday. Bill Carrigan and Bill Goodman were forced to remain indoors. The contingent hiked six miles off into the mountains, covering the total distance of a dozen miles in two hours. On the return, Manager Stahl, who had set the pace part of the way, called for a break and ran to quarters.

The whole aggregation alternately jogged or sprinted. "Jack" Bushelman, as usual, came in first, with Hugh Benedict finishing the close second. Both are long of leg and light of foot, and have shown their prowess as Marathon eligibles on several occasions. Joe Wood, Duffy Lewis, Hubert Leonard, Artie Collins and Catchers Cady and Nunamaker finished in the order named.

The latter's run was game on his part, as early in the race he split a toe on the rough track. As a result, "Nunny" may not be able to put on his spiked shoes for several days.

Circotte Has Fun as Prize Giver.

Eddie Cicotte and Heinie Wagner ran shoulder to shoulder on the tail end, and being called upon to explain, declared that they had orders to see that every body kept in the race ahead of them.

For a while Cicotte had the players going as to the matter of prizes for the first eight to finish. According to his dope, the awards were worth while. He had it that there was a gold watch for Bushelman, a silver one for Bedient, a box of cigars for Wood, a cigar holder for Lewis, and so on.

"And where do I fit in," asked Leonard. "Oh you get a silver vase and you can see it down at the third jewelry store on the left," put in Wagner.

Leonard went on the run for the jeweler's, and it was remarked that he wore a very sober face the rest of the evening.

Clyde Engle, who is captain of the Yannigans, has been trying to figure out how it happens that he has gained ten pounds in three days. The other day Engle tipped the scales at 177½. After letting seventy-two hours slip by he weighs in just before donning his uniform and discovers his weight is 187½ pounds.

Carrigan Champion Of the Water Squad.

Engle has been drinking lots of the mineral water, being in the number of regulars who frequent the spas.

Carrigan, by the way, is the champ water drinker of the aggregation and can outdistance all other competitors by several pitchers full of the liquid.

Roger Bresnahan's pitching and catching staff arrives here today from St. Louis to work out on the Pittsburg grounds, because of the bad weather at St. Louis. This is the fifth time they have been forced to change their training grounds.

Holy Cross Books Two Meets With Colgate

WORCESTER, March 25.—Manager D. R. O'Brien of the Holy Cross track team has completed arrangements with Colgate University, which will result in two dual meets, the first at Hamilton, N. Y., on Saturday, May 4, and the second at Worcester in the Spring of 1913.

Outdoor track practice will begin as soon as the weather permits. Among those who remain with the Purple from last year's team are Capt. John Boland, crack sprinter, James Davitt, in the weight events, Trowell, Colleary, McLaughlin, Joy, McCabe and Bringardner.

The Holy Cross baseball aggregation has been cut to 35 men as a result of Coach Dyer's getting a line on his men in the few days of outdoor work that the candidates enjoyed. Lynch and Gans are sure to be the first-string battery. The recent midwinter-like storms have driven the boys back into indoor practice and hope for further work on the Fitton field diamond previous to the Southern training trip has been given up.

'E-Yah' Favors Summer Ball for Collegians

ITHACA, N. Y., March 25.—"Something must be done to improve the article of ball the college teams are selling to the public," writes Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers and a former Cornell baseball coach. "I believe," he continues, "that by allowing the players to do Summer work the game would be vastly bettered. I look forward to the time when all college men who can play ball will be allowed to perfect and develop themselves during the Summer months.

"However," he writes, "I do not think it would do any harm to allow those young men to put their ability to good advantage by playing at seashore resorts or on Summer hotel teams. At present the men are not allowed to do so openly. It is human nature for them to do so on the sly, under asumed names. Thus the present scheme encourages dishonesty."

BENNETT A. A. AFTER FAST SEMI-PRO NINES

Manager Fred Hutchins of the Bennett A. A., the oldest athletic organization in Somerville, is planning to put one of the fastest baseball nines that ever represented the club on the field the coming season.

Syrie Le Roy, who formerly pitched for the Syracuse (N. Y.) High School, will do the pitching this season, with "Bugs" Knox, last year of Somerville High on the receiving end. Among the candidates for the infield are, "Trick" Haley, Ike Marts, Johnny and Tommy Norton, Mat Cummings and Frank Holland. Mike Donahy and Kelley, formerly of the Buchanans, Melbin and Lawrence Mahoney will make a bid for outfield positions. Manager Fred Hutchins, No. 162 Glen street, Somerville, would like to arrange games with strong teams.

SEAWANHAKA TO HAVE RIVAL THIS SEASON

NEW ORLEANS, March 25.—Seawanhaka, the famous racing sloop which gained the name of the "Invincible" and which was purchased by local yachtsmen from Boston parties three years ago, will have a rival this year in the Southern Gulf Coast Yachting Association regattas. Arrangements have been completed by a local syndicate to purchase one of the fastest sloops in the Massachusetts waters. This new boat will be brought here soon and will be pitted against the Sewanhaka in every race this season.

EDDIE M'GOORTY TO START FOR COAST

CHICAGO, March 25.—Eddie McGoorty, who beat Hugo Kelly at Kenosha recently, will leave for the coast the latter part of this week for a meeting in April with Frank Klaus, victor over Jack Dillon in Coffroth's middleweight elimination contests.

RHODE ISLAND BOXING DOOMED TO DEFEAT

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 25.—Representative Thomas J. O'Neil's bill to legalize boxing in the State of Rhode Island will probably fail to pass. O'Neil admitted today that he believed that his bill was doomed to defeat. There is a powerful anti-boxing party in this State.

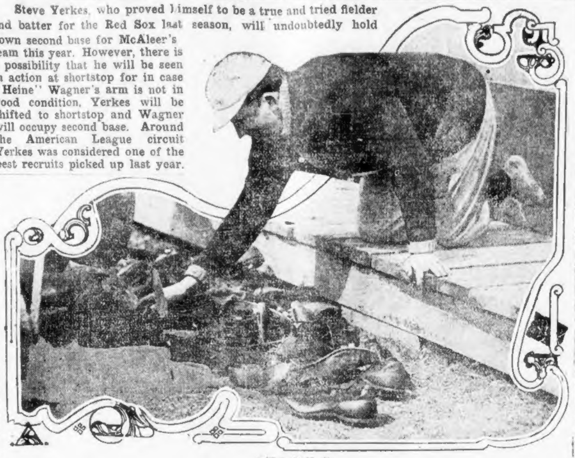
Yerkes, Red Sox, Looking for His Shoes

Steve Yerkes, who proved himself to be a true and tried fielder and batter for the Red Sox last season, will undoubtedly hold down second base for McAleer's team this year. However, there is a possibility that he will be seen in action at shortstop for in case "Heine" Wagner's arm is not in good condition, Yerkes will be shifted to shortstop and Wagner will occupy second base. Around the American League circuit Yerkes was considered one of the best recruits picked up last year.



YERKES

Provincetown Five Again Lands Title

PROVINCETOWN, March 25.—For the third successive year the local high school basketball team has won the championship of the Cape. This year's team averaged only 130 pounds in weight, but it was considered one of the swiftest in the State.

Their schedule provided for contests with strong teams, some of these outside the Cape district, including Taunton High, Boston College High, Stoughton High, Rockland High, New Bedford High and Quincy High.

Manager Ventura, left forward, was one of the stars of the team. Captain Allen proved clever in scoring and his dashes with the ball often featured. Henderson, center, showed efficiency in throwing and jumping and excelled, too, in floor work.

Rich, Ellis and Kenney guarded opponents closely. The boys all played clean ball throughout the season and their conduct on the basketball court won them many friends.

Amherst Squad Makes Trip South This Week

AMHERST, March 25.—The Amherst baseball team starts on its yearly Spring trip South this week, playing its first game Friday against Virginia at Charlottesville.

Vernon will be the mainstay of the pitching staff, and his work will be the deciding factor in the team's success. Strahan will be at the other end of the battery. The infield is practically fixed with Captain Burt back at his old position at first base, Fitts at second, Williamson at short and Pontenbeaner at third. Two positions in the outfield will be well taken care of by Kimball and Swasey. Whiteman will be taken as second pitcher or catcher, and Proudfoot will be carried as third pitcher. Catcher Searle will probably go also.

Arlie Latham, Giants' Old Coach, Released

DALLAS, Tex., March 25.—Arlie Latham, the picturesque old coach, is no longer a member of the Giants' team. On account of the limiting by the National Commission of the number of players in National League clubs to twenty-five, and McGraw's desire to carry as many of his youngsters as possible, it became necessary to let Latham go.

Arlie has gone to Memphis to see Charlie Murphy in hopes of getting a job with the Cubs. Latham is a good instructor for young players. The players are a little sad over his departure, and his merry jests on and off the field will be missed.

Before leaving Dallas, the Regulars scored a victory over Dallas, 11 to 4, hard hitting featuring.

Johnson Willing to Meet Cowboy Boxer

CINCINNATI, March 25.—Champion Jack Johnson, who opened a week's theatrical engagement here today, says that he would meet "Soldier" Willis Elder, motion picture cowboy, who threw his hat into the ring here yesterday, any time after six weeks for a side bet of $25,000 and a $40,000 purse at the ringside.

Elder is backed by G. M. Anderson, Chicago motion picture man, who expects to make $1,000,000 out of it if Elder wins.

TWO BIG HOCKEY GAMES FOR WEEK

This week will probably bring the hockey season to a close in this city, and two feature games have been arranged as a farewell attraction at the Arena.

The Victorias of Winnipeg, claimants of the world's amateur championship, will play against the Boston A. A. and the Intercolonials.

The Canadians will play B. A. A. Thursday night and the Intercolonials Saturday. The Victorias are the holders of the Allan Cup, the emblem of highest honors in amateur hockey in Canada, and should either of the Boston teams win from them it could claim the world's championship, although they would not gain possession of the Allan trophy, which does not leave Canada.

CHRISTOPHER MEETS MARTEL AT LOWELL

"Chet" Martel, of Lowell, will make his reappearance in the bowling limelight tonight when he tackles John Christopher, former champion of New England, in the first ten strings of a twenty string match. The match will be rolled at the Crescent Alleys of Lowell, the men meeting in the final ten at the Boylston Alleys tomorrow night. As both bowlers are close rivals, the Spindle City "fans" are sure to witness some fast bowling.

"DUKE" FARRELL MAY BECOME MANAGER

"Duke" Farrell, who is now coaching the young pitchers at the Pilgrims camp in Augusta, Ga., has been offered the management of the Malden-Medford team of the Greater Boston League. Farrell is not under contract with President Ward and will probably accept the position when he gets back from the South. Offers have also been made to Fred Tenney and Jack Chesbro but neither has given a definite answer.

BROOKLINE ACCEPTS SPRINGFIEL DDEFY

The Brookline High School rifle team has received and accepted a challenge from Secretary Edwin Radasch of the Technical High School of Springfield. The challenge was issued by Brookline some weeks ago to meet any team in New England. As yet no arrangements have been made as to the day on which the match will be held, but it will probably be decided some time next month.

SPRINGFIELD AFTER BOSTON CREW RACE

SPRINGFIELD, March 25.—Manager Pirnie of the Springfield High School crew, is making efforts to bring some Boston school here for a race during the first part of June. Springfield will race the Groton School at Groton on May 25 and will also tackle the Yale freshman crew at the Yale regatta in the New Haven harbor early in May.

Not one man in a hundred can strop a razor on an ordinary strop.

It requires a knack that few have. Fortunately for Gillette users there is a stropper that strops Gillette blades with mechanical accuracy.

Twinplex Stropper
two edges at once
Safety Razor

will keep Gillette blades in perfect shaving condition indefinitely, 100 to 500 shaves from one blade. Strops both edges at once; reverses itself and strops the other side,—30 seconds and all edges are sharp. Small, handsome, simple to use, requires no skill. Can't get out of order. Guaranteed for ten years. Sold by all good dealers on thirty days' trial.

Mumps Was Cause of Westfield's Downfall

WESTFIELD, March 25.—The local high school basketball team has disbanded for the season. The five would have undoubtedly been ranked with the leading schoolboy quintets in the State if an epidemic of mumps had not struck the team when it was travelling at a merry pace.

When the Jinx made its entrance, Westfield had a record of thirteen victories and no defeats. First one player and then another was stricken with mumps until most all of the regulars were on the sick list.

French Tennis Player Is Seriously Hurt

PARIS, March 25.—Laurentz, the French tennis champion, met with a serious accident while playing a match at Neuilly. The ball took an erratic bound and struck Laurentz in the eye, rupturing a blood vessel. As a result of the accident the injured player will probably be withdrawn as a representative of France in the first round with England for the Davis Tennis Cup. The withdrawal of Laurentz will seriously handicap France, as he is the leading player in France.

Bob Harmon and Steel Cardinal "Holdouts"

ST. LOUIS, March 25.—Bill Steel and Bob Harmon, two of the best right-handers in the National League and the mainstay of the Cardinal's pitching staff, have thus far refused to sign contracts. The Cardinals' training plans have been switched again. Too much cold weather has prevented battery practice, and six pitchers and two catchers have been sent to Hot Springs for a workout until warm weather starts here.

RILEY'S COLUMN

JIMMIE CALLAHAN, the "Come Back Kid" of baseball, is reported to be training his White Sox at Waco, Texas, seven-tenths in the things mental and three-tenths in the things physical, while, according to the same reports, all the other managers are training their men nine-tenths in the things physical and one-tenth in the things mental in baseball. Don't you believe it.

ACCORDING to the magazines, baseball pennants are won by a deliberate mental scheme devised by the manager and carried along in the gray matter of all the members of the team. As a matter of fact the most the managers can do in the Spring training camps is to watch the recruits for a few days, see that the "Vets" are in good physical condition and correct ordinary faults of baseball.

"INSIDE baseball" is developed day by day year in year out in all the leagues and, of course, reaches its nearest stage to perfection in the teams of veterans which hold the pennants. The other managers must devise something better to take the flag away from the holders so they pay a little more attention to the new men and then drop them.

* * *

"THE fans" expect to see the teams come back from the training camps entirely reconstructed. They have heard of so many world beating recruits being gathered during the Winter season that they imagine few of the old faces will be seen this year. As a matter of fact they will all come back in a week or so and no team will have more than one new man on the diamond except where "(X)" batted for Smith in the ninth appears in the newspaper score.

* * *

THE recruit will be batting for Smith many a day before you will see his name in the regular batting order. It takes years to develop a baseball team in the big leagues, and a lad must know his "inside baseball" and be perfected in the art before you see his name in the regular column.

* * *

IF you are eager to see new faces on the diamond this year, watch the pitcher's box. You will see plenty of them in April and May. But there won't be many working there in July and August. All of which leads us to the news item that in two weeks the training camps will unload the most of the recruits back where they came from and start playing baseball about where they left off last year.

* * *

RED DOOIN, whose Quakers handed a double defeat to the Red Sox at Hot Springs, is actually counting on hauling down the National League flag this year. Red has a bunch of youngsters in training.

* * *

LAST year he had a good start and went off flying, but hard luck fell on his trail. The Pilgrims have to stack up against the same bunch at the very opening of the season this year, and maybe Dooin will be minus the hard luck this time.

THE newest team of the lot will probably be the Boston Nationals, and that bunch will probably not play anybody outside the pitcher's box who had not been heard from last year.

MIKE DONLIN is in prime condition this Spring, according to reports from Hot Springs. He was a trifle off form when he joined the Boston Nationals, after his long retirement. But even with Mike at his best, J. Montgomery Ward has the better of the trade with Pittsburg. He is immensely satisfied with "Vin" Campbell. Campbell is certainly a clouter, and a wonder on the bases, judging from appearances thus far. He also covers a world of ground.

* * *

HARRY DAVIS, who was believed to have a bunch of pennant chasers, is already saying things about his Naps, and insists that they lack pepper. Davis has lost his temper and demands that his men get into the game more at their training camp at New Orleans.

* * *

THE Pirates have an Olympic candidate in Ralph Cameron, the crack sprinter, who quit as quarterback with the Minnesota University football team to receive $3,500 a year chasing flies for Pittsburg. Capron, is a candidate for Fred Clark's place in the field.

* * *

THE Cubs are already homeward-bound from their training camp at New Orleans. They are in Kentucky now and will spend the week at Louisville.

* * *

THE substitution of Holyoke for Waterbury in the Nutmeg League ought to strengthen that organization. This would revive the rivalry with Springfield. The other four cities in the league are New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport and New Britain.

* * *

IN anticipation of the eventual decline of his great pitching corps, Connie Mack is corralling a big bunch of eligible youngsters who he will work into the game one by one. They include Roger Salmon, a Princeton left-hander; Lester Long, late of Lafayette University, and one McCreary, star pitcher of Pennsylvania State College last year.

* * *

IT doesn't do much good to worry about training camp reports that a bunch of veterans are playing slow ball. You can't drive the veterans into gingery work at this stage of the game. The youngsters all play peppery ball because they are looking for jobs, but the old-timers get into condition easily and gradually. Jake Stahl has a crew of veterans at Hot Springs and they'll play as fast baseball as they ever did when the bell rings.

McGoorty Throws Over His Former Manager

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 25.—Eddie McGoorty, with his arrival at the stage of possible middleweight title contender, has followed the lead of many other champions and has dropped the manager who led him into the centre of the stage. Manager Patsey Callahan has been ditched in favor of Matty Forkkins of Chicago, who is now planning to take McGoorty on a trip to the Pacific coast.

Callahan was taken ill several months ago and was forced to pass up the active management of McGoorty for the time being. Now that he has recovered Eddie has not shown any symptoms of wanting to go back under Callahan, who was the man that made McGoorty.

MACKMEN WINNERS.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 25.—A team of the Philadelphia Americans defeated the Houston, Texas League team, 11 to 3. Oldring, Murphy and Strunk led the hitting.

Harvard Postpones Football Practice

Spring football practice for the Harvard varsity squad, which was scheduled to start today, was postponed until Soldiers Field is in better condition. The rains and snows of the past few days has turned the Cambridge field into a fair-sized puddle and Haughton has no intention of risking injuries.

The baseball cage is in use every afternoon and Captain Percy Wendell announced last evening that the pigskin practice would be postponed until the ground clears up. The plan that will be undoubtedly followed this year will keep the men at daily practice until May 1 and the coaches paying particular attention to the individual players.

GAME GOES 11 INNINGS.

GALVESTON, March 25.—The second division of the Philadelphia Americans defeated the Galveston, Texas, League team, 3 to 1, in an eleven-inning game.

ROLLER'S MAGIC MAT MEDICINE

After eating his breakfast this morning, which consisted of bacon, eggs and a cup of choice Boston coffee, Dr. Benjamin Roller, a prominent Seattle healer, took out his medicine case and therewith opened three small bottles. Each of the bottles contained a white powder. The esteemed doctor took a teaspoonful of the powder out of each bottle, put them in a glass, added a little water and then drained the glass.

This combination is known as Doc Roller's wrestling tonic. It is guaranteed to give the patient strength and endurance and to enable him to win wrestling matches. The doctor has great faith in his tonic, though its charm failed to work on several occasions, namely, when he had a desire to become wrestling champion and also when he became a "white hope."

Roller has not been overtaxed with patients the past few years. One of the chief reasons is because he has been too busy wrestling to devote a great deal of his time to medicine. He meets Sampson at the Grand Opera House tonight in a finish match, best two falls out of three, and is confident of a victory. Sampson is a real bad man when it comes to mussing up aspirants for wrestling honors and it is hinted that he carries around a bottle of wrestling tonic which rivals that of Roller.

Perelli and Polski meet in the semi-final and the fur is sure to fly. This match is likely to be a combination of a wrestling match, a prize fight and a little setto between "bulls."

There will be two good preliminaries between local boys.

Connolly and Farren Ready for Bouts

Johnny Connolly and Joe Farren have finished training for their bouts at the Central A. C. tomorrow night. Eddie Mack's walloppers are as hard as nails and both of them are out to win their bouts.

Connolly meets Joe White of South Boston, who is considered some fighter in pugilistic society circles. Joseph wasn't a world beater a year ago, but he has been coming fast lately and his friends now claim that he has arrived. White is very rugged, and if he can slip across one of his patented "haymakers" Mr. Connolly will know that he has been hit.

Farren will give battle with Eddie Reagan of Quincy, and he is willing to wager every cent that he has got (he had $1.98 the last time that I saw him) that he will be returned the winner.

Four Bouts Billed for Commercial A. C.

The Commercial A. C. of Malden has arranged its card for tomorrow night. The ball will be started rolling with a six-round bout between Ed Walker of Medford and Joe Tranior of Sonil. Eddie Kenney of Cambridge will clash with Young Aronson of Dorchester in another six-round preliminary. Young Bullard and Roller Morris are billed to swap punches in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. Joe Budreau of Somerville and Jack Conway of Roxbury will furnish the fireworks in the main bout of eight rounds. The Highland boy is no relation to the writer, but if he fails to bring home the bacon I will be compelled to go into training and become a bantam "hope" in order to hold up the family moniker.

Great Interest in Amateur Championships.

There will not be any vacant seats at the New England amateur boxing championships which are scheduled to take place at Mechanics' building next Saturday evening. Followers of the squared circle are displaying intense interest in the tourney and a great crowd is sure to turn out in order to take in the festivities. The competition in the various classes should be close. Some corking good amateur boxers have been developed in New England the past Winter.

150-Mile Trip to Play Ball Game

Ward Wants to Try Out Pilgrims

By L. R. MURDOCK,
Sporting Editor, American.

L R MURDOCH

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 25.—In an effort to play at least one regular ball game before his team starts North, John M. Ward will send twelve men—his Regulars—over to Athens, Ga., Wednesday morning, to crossbats with George T. Stallings' Buffalo team.

Athens is a city of about 22,000 humans, one-half of whom are naturally counted on as being baseball "fans." Stallings' bunch, who came here Saturday, looking for blood, and went away because they found nothing but rain, are training on George's plantation, near Athens.

Ward promised them a game and will make good, even if he does have to travel 150 miles out of his way with a dozen of his baseball players to keep the agreement.

CAMPBELL TO GET FIRST SHOW.

Johnny Kling, who is the last word in the Pilgrim bunch now, has picked seven Regulars, two catchers and three pitchers to take the trip. He has changed his batting order a bit to try Campbell, the husky left-handed clouter at the top.

He wants Campbell to "get on" because he knows that if he lands on the paths with Sweeney back of him to take advantage of "inside baseball" and Miller and Jackson back of Sweeney, to smash the ball over against the fence somewhere, he may be using the best his team possesses on the offensive.

He will bat his men in this order: Campbell, c.f.; Sweeney, 2b; Miller, r.f.; Jackson, l.f.; Hauser, 2b; Spratt, s.s.; McDonald, 3b; Kling and Kariden, c.; Young, Tyler and Donnelly, p.

Kling is sending along these pitchers because he believes they have come earliest to hand. One of them, Tyler, is a left-hander, and Young and Donnelly, of course, are natural flingers.

Ingerton will not be taken, because "Scotty" has not yet signed, and, of course, he will play in no games with the teams until he has affixed his John Hancock to a Pilgrim binder.

The rest of the squad will stay in Augusta Wednesday and will leave early Thursday morning for Columbia, S. C., where the Pilgrims are booked to play the University of South Carolina team that afternoon. The Regulars, who go to Athens, will arrive by another route Thursday noon, and the entire squad will merge there.

Kling to Cut Squad Down Before Long.

The team will play Thursday and Friday at Columbia, and Saturday at Norfolk, Va. About that time being to look for the dropping of "Rookies." Kling will cut his squad down to about twenty-five men by the time the playing season opens, April 11, according to the best "dope" available.

It will be easy to get along without some of the fielders, but the most difficult task will be to weed out pitchers who have not had a chance yet to show whether they are worth keeping.

The weather has held them all back. It rained the most of Saturday and Sunday, so that today the Pilgrims could not play at Augusta Park. It is likely that they have seen the last of that place.

If it is dry enough the men may get together today at Allen Park, where there is a rough diamond. But Augusta is so wet now that there will be little baseball until the team gets farther North.

The men have been eager and ambitious to play baseball at every opportunity, but Saturday's and Sunday's rains thoroughly disgusted them and they don't care now how soon the northward journey begins. They would all be happy if they could pull out today.

The difference between twenty-degree weather in Boston and eighty-five-degree weather in Augusta is immense, but it doesn't count if the baseball players have to stay indoors almost as much in Augusta as they would in Boston.

The men were almost "on edge" Friday when they played some of the cleanest baseball yet seen at this time of the year and gave evidence that if they could continue daily practice they would probably soon develop top speed. But then came the deluge and they will have to start all over again.

DOZEN BOSTON TEAMS IN BOWLING TOURNEY

Entries for the sixth annual tournament of the National Duck and Candlepin Bowling Congress, which will be held at Lawrence, April 8-18, will close Saturday night. April 15 will be Connecticut day with two teams from Hartford and others from Waterbury and New London. Providence will send at least four teams, while Boston will have more than a dozen and Worcester seven. Portland and Westbrook, Me., Nashua, Portsmouth, Dover, Springfield, Brockton, Fall River, New Bedford and Lowell will also send teams.

ROXBURY ALLEY TITLE TOURNEY

Nearly 100 of the best bowlers have entered the tournament being run by the Roxbury Crossing Alleys to decide the champion of Roxbury. Before the entry list is closed tonight Frank McFarland, who is running the contest, expects to have close to 150 entries.

The date set for the opening of the contest is April 2. As yet no other arrangements have been made as to how many days the tournament will last but the committee in charge of the affair expects to decide this within a few days.

Roxbury has turned out some excellent bowlers and there is sure to be some mighty fine mingling when the contest gets under way.

Among the prominent entries are those of Dr. Bruce, James Donnelly, Dave O'Brien, Harry Creutz, Bart Bowen, William Blaney and a host of others.

City Hall League Closes Great Season.

The City Hall League, which has created quite a stir among the "Pols" this season, has finished its schedule. The Income Tax team won first place handily but the fight for second position will long be remembered.

The Street Commissioners and Clerks are now tied for that honor. The Clerks ousted Jimmy Gallivan's boys towards the end of the season leading by one game. At the final meeting the Street Commissioners met the Assessor Clerks and won all four points, while the best the Clerks could do to Louis O'Rourke's boys was to capture three points.

The roll-off is to come later, but the City Clerks are much depressed over their defeat. Jim Norton carried off the individual honors with John McGrath second.

Poehler and Goodnow In Springfield Match.

Paul Poehler, with his backer, G. M. Goodnow, will be a headline attraction among the Springfield "fans" tomorrow night. Poehler and Goodnow will roll against George Ryan and Art Lamb, considered two of the best bowlers of that city.

Wednesday night the champion will roll the final twenty strings of his match with Jim Skinner of Holyoke at the Bazata Alleys of Westfield. As he has a lead of over 100 pins he is not expecting much trouble from the Holyoke crack. This match will be for a purse of $500.

South Boston Yacht Club Match This Week.

Some big doings are promised at the South Boston Yacht Club on Thursday night, when two teams to be known as the Poehler Pets and the Congress Specials roll two teams composed of the crack bowlers of the yacht club.

Paul himself will head the Poehler's Pets with Terry Griffin, winner of the third prize in the AMERICAN championship contest, as his chief aid. "Old Hoss" Cogswell will also take his place in the lineup with two other well known bowlers.

Harvey Heintz will roll anchorman for the Congress Specials, with Hitchings, Brown, Duplace and Bushnell as his assistants. "Dutch" is confident that he will carry off some of the honors.

K. of C. League to Give Prizes at Banquet.

Prizes will be distributed among the winners of the K. of C. League at its annual banquet which will take place on April 9 at the Columbus Club Hall, Pearl and Pleasant streets, Dorchester.

State officers of the order, including the State deputy, State secretary, State chaplain and grand knight of councils in the league, will be among those present. Committee arrangements are in charge of Stanley J. Gallagher. A big array of talent will be included on the bill.

High Rollers to Meet In Special Match.

The five highest individual rollers in the A. O. U. W. League will roll against the five best men of the Elite League on Tuesday, April 2 at the Elite Alleys for a substantial side bet.

The A. O. U. W. rollers will also take on men from the Knights of Columbus League at the New Boston Alleys on April 10, under the same conditions.

COACHES CUT DOWN WILLIAMS SQUAD

WILLIAMSTOWN, March 25.—Those who survived the cut in the Williams baseball squad are: 1912, Anderson, Ayres, Linder, Nagle, Otis, Shons, Trumbull and Wallace; 1913, Bowen, Davis, Freeman, R. V. Lewis, Prindle and M. H. Smith; 1914, Ainslie, C. M. Brown, Gillette, Higginbotham, G. W. Smith; 1915, Andrews, Crawford, Debevoise, Deely, Eells, Garfiels, K. H. Hodge, Lavigne, Michler, Parsons, Swain and Toolan. The work still consists of batting, fielding and sprinting practice.

Amateur Baseball Games Wanted

The Windsor A. C. of Dorchester has reorganized for the coming year and is prepared to meet all aspirants averaging 17-18 years old. The team is open to meet all nines between April 19 and Labor Day. Last season Manager Allen piloted his team through Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont and made a very creditable showing. This year Allen has procured some fast players and a strong nine is looked for. Lane, formerly of the Latin School, and Gamelli of Revere will be the catching candidates. Goodwin and McKenzie of Gloucester and East Boston, respectively, will do the pitching. A fast infield is available with Campers of Dorchester High at first, Sughrue at second, Bill Bergin at short and O'Donnell at third. Sughrue and Pergin formerly played for the Oak Park High School of Chicago, both making excellent records in the interscholastic circles of the West. There are over twenty-five candidates trying for the outfield. The most promising of those are "Polo" Brousseau, also of Oak Park High; George Baldwin, and Steve Shatelle, formerly of New Bedford. Other candidates for the outfield positions are Stair, Allen, Little, Dix, Gibbs, Fish and Linehan, formerly of the New York State League. Manager Harry Allen, No. 26 Nonquit street, Dorchester.

The Warrens of Dorchester will organize this year and challenge any fifteen-year-old team in Boston or away from home. The team will consist of Smith, catcher; Lynn, pitcher; Brackett, first base; Hoar, second base; Coughlin, third base; McLaughlin, shortstop; Corhurl, left field; Burden, centre field; Keefe, right field. Games are wanted for April, May, June and July. Games may be scheduled in writing or telephoning (1756-M), to Joseph McLaughlin, No. 11 Elmdale street, Dorchester, Mass.

The Elmyra Ball Club has organized for the coming season with a fast bunch of ball tossers. The lineup is: J. O'Neil, catcher; W. McCarthy, pitcher; D. O'Brien, first base; J. O'Brien, second base; A. Dawson, shortstop; E. Dawson, third base; J. Drummond, right field; Jim Mack, centre field; M. Byrne, left field. I would like to arrange games with the fastest team in New England. Address G. Green, mgr., No. 29 Wilfred street, Lynn, Mass.

The Crescents of South Boston would like to arrange games with any seventeen-year-old teams in and around Boston. Neponset Wanderers preferred. Apply Manager John Boylan, No. 219 W. Second street, South Boston.

NEW ATHLETIC CLUB AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

Boston will get back on the boxing map when the Pilgrim A. A. opens its quarters at the Boston Arena the first of next month. The new club will stage bouts between the leading boxers in the country.

The Pilgrim A. A. will not go in merely for boxing. It will also promote other athletic events. On April 13, the St. Botolph street organization will conduct its first athletic event, which will be a cross-country run, open to all amateur athletes.

No big bouts have been pulled off in this city since the Armory A. A. closed up last Fall. The American A. C. and the Central A. A. have done more than their part in keeping interest in the sport alive, but, of course, they have only been able to stage bouts between local boys.

The Arena is ideal for boxing purposes. It has a seating capacity of over 4,000. It will be possible to put close to 2,500 seats on the ground floor. There is also standing room for at least 500 people. No other club in the country can accommodate such an enormous crowd.

Success of Club Assured.

The Armory A. A. was rightfully rated as one of the finest boxing clubs in the United States, but the new organization has even better facilities for staging glove bouts than the Tremont street club had.

The Armory was not able to take care of more than 2,500 people, and as a result it was impossible to put a champion against a contender for the title.

New England boxing enthusiasts are sure to give the Pilgrim A. A. the best of support. The manly art has always had many suporters in this section of the country. Many important ring battles have been staged on New England soil.

Dr. Heber Bishop, president of the new club, is well known in sporting circles and has been the leader in a number of big athletic movements. Albert W. Robertson, vice-president of the club, has taken an active part in athletics during the past five years. William Flynn, treasurer and secretary, is a Boston newspaper man.

The Pilgrim A. A. will likely stage twelve-round bouts and will give decisions. A referee has not yet been selected but the chances are that Hector McInnis of South Boston will be the man chosen for the position.

To Stage Amateur Bouts.

W. W. Hamilton, a local newspaper man, is the most promising candidate for the position of matchmaker. The selection of the referee and matchmaker will be decided at a meeting of the club directors which will take place next week.

The Pilgrim A. A. is planning to stage an amateur boxing tournament Monday evening, April 15. The finals in the national amateur championships will be held in Mechanics building earlier in the month, and several of the winners at the national tourney may appear in special bouts at the opening show of the new club.

LOSSING

BENSON J. LOSSING, LL. D.—The author of A History of the Civil War, 1861-65—was more than a historian, and he was more than an engaging writer, though to be sure he was both of these. He was also a great authority; a court of last resort for facts and data. He knew how to write history and he gathered his material in a manner all his own. Charles Dudley Warner said of him, "In reading the historical works of Lossing, one is amazed that any human being could carry so much information, and yet carry it so lightly. His vast array of facts did not seem to bear him down; he was as buoyant as cork and as light as a feather."

John Morley, in writing of Dr. Lossing, said, "To be interesting and at the same time authentic—to be patriotic and at the same time impartial—to be at once a reader for young and old—this was his peculiar genius, and in this he was supreme."

Brander Matthews said, "He was the most conscientious and thorough writer of history this country has produced."

Sir Walter Besant once said that it is easier to make history than it is to write it, and that it is not so difficult to conduct a battle as it is to describe one. Whether this be literally true or not, there is little doubt that writing history is one thing, and writing history that the world will read is quite another. The power to state facts accurately, and yet to fill them with charm and interest is the gift that has been given to few men. Dr. Lossing had this supreme gift. He wrote a score of fascinating books, and his writing was as graceful and natural as the flight of a bird. He was a veritable wizard of the pen. Such a man was he in his peculiar field that Oliver Wendell Holmes said of him that he had done more than any other man to make history interesting and popular. His history of the Civil War was written at the time when the facts were fresh. Lossing was intimately acquainted with the great leaders of the country. He conversed with President Lincoln, Generals Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, and other great men of the time. He heard them talk and noted what they told him. He secured the stories and opinions of those who had been concerned in what he described. He traveled the country over and visited the scenes and battlegrounds of the great national conflict and was able to tell what he had seen and heard—and with the pen of a genius. As we read, all is alive and real. The events, the battles of the war, the triumphs and defeats are told faithfully and vividly. It was Lossing's purpose to make this history familiar to all, and by doing so, to kindle in this natural, wholesome way the spirit of patriotism. The reader is carried on from page to page, from chapter to chapter, with an ever-compelling interest that makes it difficult to pause. There is nothing tedious or dull; every character is real, and all the thrilling events and scenes seems to be filled with new interest and life. Lossing put his vast learning into this work. He wished it to be regarded as a memorial to him. He died loaded with glory and honors. A dozen great colleges had conferred on him scholarly and honorary degrees, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City had made him an Honorary Fellow for life.

SECTION ONE

The Boston American

gladly accepted the appointment to be sole distributor of this memorial work for all New England, not only on account of its great educational value, but because the plan of publishing at a nominal charge makes it possible to be placed in every home.

THE MARVEL IS that American readers have now for a short time, prior to the advance which must take place in cost, the opportunity of owning a splendid history of the Civil War by a great authority and best of all copies of the choicest of the famous Brady War Photographs, of which the original negatives are now in the possession of the United States Government. The Government paid Mr. Brady nearly fifty years ago $27,840.00 for these negatives. They were valued then at $150,000.00 by Generals Grant, Butler and Garfield. A private collection of photographs taken during the war has also been loaned to further illustrate this great history. The nominal charge of 15 cents for every section will be made as ready to cover the cost of handling this distribution. The American believes that no reader will forego the great advantage of securing this splendid and valuable work. Clip the necessary coupon today and present it Monday morning. The annals of book publishing do not show such extraordinary value as the publishing of this memorial work at this time. It is a valuable addition to all libraries and the American urges its readers to act quickly to avoid disappointment.

AT GREAT COST

There is ready to-day the first section of Lossing's History of the CIVIL WAR, illustrated with copies of the famous Brady War Photographs. The work will be completed in sixteen sections at the rate of one each week. Each section is printed on fine enamel paper, in large and clear type especially made for the purpose. The engravings are made direct from the Brady photographs by the best engravers obtainable. Each section will be 9x12 inches. The entire work will be profusely illustrated with these engravings, scarcely a page being without illustrations Some sections have 40 photographs, while others will include over 150 separate photographs and altogether thousands of portraits. Many of the photographs require full pages for themselves. These photographs show the great scenes throughout the four years of the war and are of extraordinary historic interest at this time. You will see through the pages photographs taken fifty years ago of camp grounds, battlefields, regiments, hospitals, men in the trenches, dead, wounded, dying, and great leaders on both sides, all by the faithful reproduction of the famous Brady War negatives. The Boston American, acting as sole distributor in New England, forms for its readers a great wholesale club and the usual trade expenses are dispensed with, so that each reader will only pay the cost of handling each section as ready when made in an enormous edition.

IT IS AN AMAZING FACT that fifty years after, a faithful copy of the wonderful Brady war pictures, taken at the risk of his life and in the turmoil and strife of a great struggle, can be handed to AMERICAN readers at a nominal cost. It is the duty of every AMERICAN reader to see that this great opportunity is made use of without delay, as this great American work must eventually be placed in all American homes, every library and every school.

THE MAGNIFICENT SECTIONS

The War Memorial Association has undertaken the publication, in sumptuous style, of nothing less than A History of the Civil War by Benson J. Lossing, LL.D., to be profusely illustrated with copies of a selection of the Brady War Photographs owned by the United States Government, permission for the reproduction of which has been granted by the War Department. This work will not only give a faithful record of the great conflict by the greatest historian of the time, but the reproduction of the well-nigh priceless Brady War Photographs, taken "on the spot" 1861-1865, will give a vivid and marvelous panorama of the great scenes of the war and portraits of the famous generals, leaders and officers on both sides and with the fidelity of the wonderful Brady cameras. This extraordinary work will commemorate, as nothing else can do, the 50th anniversary of the greatest conflict the world has ever known. Brady's wonderful genius for taking fine photographs, often at the risk of his life, and present-day methods for making exact copies on copper plates for printing bring back for all time this great historical record for the present and future generations.

HENRY A. OGDEN

stands in the front rank of American painters of Colonial and Military subjects. By long and careful study he developed an ability amounting to genius in the portraiture of Colonial subjects and Army men and scenes. He is the great grandson of a Revolutionary hero who defended Bunker Hill. His artistic ability in historic art attracted the attention of the Quartermaster-General of the United States Army, by whom he was engaged under authority of Congress to paint the designs for color plates of all the uniforms of the Army from the time of Washington. He made them much more than a pictorial record of the various forms of dress which have been used in the Army since its beginning in 1775. While they show with accurate detail every change in the dress of officers and soldiers, he has also, whenever possible, made his pictures portraits of men who were prominent in the Army at the time represented by the picture. And his strong dramatic sense has caused him to portray each group of men as typical of the time to which they belonged, and to make them appear alive, vigorous, and intensely interesting. He did this great work with the complete approval of the Government authorities of the War Department.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S LAST INTERVIEW WITH GEN. GEO. B. McCLELLAN, AT ANTIETAM, 1862
This Brady War Negative Has Been Valued at $5,000.

OGDEN'S FAMOUS BATTLEFIELD COLLECTION of the Civil War is reproduced in colors as frontispieces for eight of the sections of this history, where we find eight great Union commanders not merely in the scenes of battle, but in a critical moment, in some sharp climax or decisive movement that passes into history in the lives of these military heroes at a great hour. Mr. Ogden has executed this work with rare ability and skill. As the sections of this work are received, great military events will be found as colored frontispieces to each of the last eight, making sixteen color plates in all.

A Most Comprehensive Account Begins in Section One, Telling the Causes That Led to the Great Conflict, and 40 Famous War Photographs

BRADY

MATHEW B. BRADY, who photographed the Civil War, 1861-65, and sold his wonderful collection of negatives to the United States Government, was unique as a photographic artist. The reproduction of his famous War negatives shows in this history of the Civil War that he was fifty years in advance of his time, for many of his photographs compare favorably with the best quality of work to-day. That he was well equipped for this great work is shown by his remarkable career. In the early 50's, he was the representative photographic artist of the day. His studios on Broadway, New York City, were patronized by the famous men and women of the period. The list of those who posed before his magic camera is too long to receive more than passing mention in this brief notice. A few of the prominent negatives now in the possession of the United States Government may, however, be mentioned, such as portraits of Washington Irving, James Fenimore Cooper, Edgar Allan Poe, Walt Whitman, Charles Dickens, Nathaniel Hawthorne, William Cullen Bryant, John G. Saxe, John Lathrop Motley, and the great authors and poets of the period. Among the ex-Presidents may be mentioned the portraits of Abraham Lincoln, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, James A. Garfield, while the members of the stage contributed to his marvelous collection of celebrities such portraits as Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson, Jenny Lind, Dion Boucicault, J. C. Howard, the actor and father of the first little Eva of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." A few of the famous men and women of the time may be mentioned, as Horace Greeley, Henry Ward Beecher, Clara Barton—the founder of the world-famous Red Cross Society—Edward Everett, Ben Perley Poor, Granville Dodge—the famous engineer—General Sam Houston, Henry Grinnell, famous Arctic explorer.

This list taken at random from thousands, shows beyond dispute that Brady was the leader in his profession. The most important of all Brady's work, as General Greely says, is his marvelous collection of Civil War photographs. It was Brady who left his profitable business to take pictures of the War. He secured permission from President Lincoln, and under the protection of Allan Pinkerton of the Secret Service Bureau, Brady and his men started taking pictures, thinking that the War would not last more than two or three months, but for four long, weary years, they were actively at work throughout the country, and his wonderful collection of negatives of the great historical scenes and portraits of the leaders on both sides now attest to his energetic and remarkable work. It was these negatives that he sold to the United States Government, and by special permission of the War Department, reproductions have been made direct from the originals which so fittingly illustrate, as nothing else could do, the vivid text of Dr. Lossing in this History of the Civil War. Generals Grant, Butler and Garfield valued this collection at $150,000.00. As it turns out today, this valuation was remarkably conservative. Yet Brady sold the negatives to the Government for $27,840. The reproduction of these famous negatives at this time by permission of the War Department not only commemorates the fiftieth anniversary of the [illegible] the Nation, but will leave a memorial to Mathew B. Brady for future generations as the photographic genius of his time.

The Latest Dances and How to Dance Them

By Maurice, the Cabaret Artist—The Bunny Hug

A good pose in the bunny hug is illustrated here, but it may be too acrobatic for many people. In such cases the woman dancer need not lean back very far.

Americans are the best dancers in the world. They dance with more grace and abandon than the Spanish people even, but sometimes they are inclined to be careless in the way they hold themselves.

Hold yourself perfectly straight; don't be stiff, however.

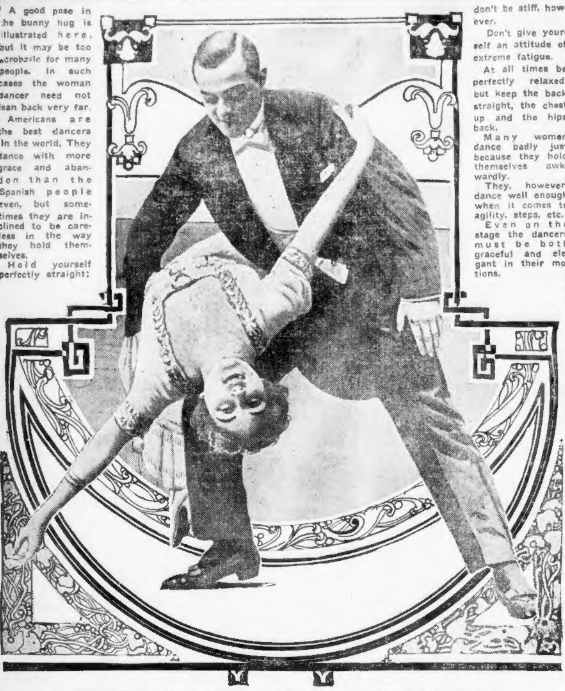
Don't give yourself an attitude of extreme fatigue.

At all times be perfectly relaxed, but keep the back straight, the chest up and the hips back.

Many women dance badly just because they hold themselves awkwardly.

They, however, dance well enough when it comes to agility, steps, etc.

Even on the stage the dancers must be both graceful and elegant in their motions.



MAURICE AND FLORENCE WALTON IN A POSE OF THE BUNNY HUG DANCE.

By MAURICE.

THE Bunny Hug is another of those dances which has created an uproar for no apparent reason except certain people who don't know how to dance, anyhow, have danced it neither wisely nor well.

Of course on the stage it's another story. Many people go to the theatre with the idea that they are going to be shocked. If they aren't startled they aren't pleased and don't think they have gotten their money's worth.

For these people, and there are thousands more than you think, one accentuates the dances, makes them broader and suggestive. But even on the stage the dancers must be both graceful and elegant in their motions. Otherwise the Bunny Hug, the Turkey Trot and all the other modern dances are ugly and vulgar, to say the least.

The Chief Fault

The great trouble with American dancers is that they don't know how to hold themselves. This applies to men as well as to women. The women don't stand up straight, and though they are both lithe and graceful and full of energy, they stand and hold themselves during the dance in the attitude of extreme fatigue.

Now, you ought to hold yourself up, up straight from the waist. I don't mean to be stiff, because one should be able to be perfectly relaxed, at the same time keeping the back straight, chest up and hips back. Many women dance badly just because they hold themselves awkwardly. They dance well enough when it comes to their agility, steps, etc.

Americans are the best dancers in the world. They dance with more grace and abandon than the Spanish people, even, but sometimes they are inclined to be careless in the way they hold themselves.

Their chests sink in and the body describes a sort of crescent toward the front. This is just as ugly as the stiff German way of waltzing and the bent-kneed way in which so many French people dance.

Hold yourself perfectly straight; don't be stiff, however. And now for the Bunny Hug.

The Bunny Hug

Some one said this dance was especially adapted to engaged couples. I think it is, too.

It certainly is not a wild or hilarious dance. It is a sort of "snuggly" dance where the girl puts her head on her partner's shoulder and the two, in close embrace, do a very slow two-step, describing a circle about the centre of the stage or floor.

On the stage the dance has not found favor except when more acrobatic steps are joined to the "Hug." It is too much like the lovers in the park on Summer evenings, so to make the dance more successful and give it variety all kinds of different postures and poses are added. The original step is the "Hug" as described.

This should go with the slow part of the music in two-step time. If a livelier tempo is struck the two dance a turkey trot "rock," assuming the regular dance position, but with hands on each other's shoulders.

At the end of each musical phrase, when the natural pause comes in the music, the dancers assume a pose which is held until the music starts again.

Unless you have some natural ability to mimic the poses seen on the stage I'm afraid you will not be a very good dancer of modern dances, because a great deal of this posing comes into the dances.

One good pose is illustrated here, but it may be too acrobatic for many people. In such cases the lady need not bend backward.

A simple pose is taken in this way: At the end of the musical phrase let go one hand suddenly, the man placing his free hand on his hip, the lady holding her arm high with the graceful curve of the Spanish duchess. Feet and body should express vigorous movement suddenly stopped.

There is a step called the "boa hug" which is also used in dancing the bunny hug. The man stands still, merely marking time with a slight motion of the body.

His partner places one hand on his shoulder. Then back to back she starts to dance around him, making very short steps in time to the music and with considerable undulation of the body.

When she has circled around him twice she should land with her back to him just in front of him. A sudden turn, in which the two face each other and a pose which can be adapted from the Spanish, Russian or acrobatic dances, ends this step.

Do You Know That—

A clock, constructed throughout of of glass, is the result of six years' work on the part of a Bavarian glass-polisher. The plates and pillars which form the framework are of glass, and are bolted together with glass screws. The dial plate, hands, shafts, and cog wheels are of glass, and glass wedges and pins are used for fastening the various parts of the running gear together. Like the clock itself, the key by which it is wound is of glass. The construction of the remarkable timepiece was a matter of infinite pains. Some of the parts had to be made as many as forty times before a clock that would go could be produced.

Siam is one of the few countries which boast of a corps of women police. The members of this Amazon guard are all old and ugly. They wear a uniform, though they are not armed. Their chief duty is to act as gatekeepers of the Inner, or Women's Palace at Bangkok. They follow any stranger who enters the palace and remain with him until he takes his departure. They see that there is no mischief done, and that no one makes love to the royal wives and court ladies. The palace has some difficulty in recruiting these guards, as the work is hard and the pay poor.

The most treasured fowl in the possession of an Illinois farmer named Ude is a rare hen which can swim like a duck. Not only can this wise fowl swim, but it can dive, too, going under for fish being one of its peculiar hobbies. The hen is of the Indian game-bird variety. Mr. Ude trained it for ten months, and he will use it as a decoy for ducks on shooting trips.

THEY speak of it as "Life's fitful fever," but most of us have such hair-raising experiences it is more like chills.

An open confession may be good for the soul, but it is hard on the reputation.

In trying to help the unfortunate a man is often impressed with the great number of people there are in this world who will trade off a cow for a graphophone.

Bible readers should investigate and report: Did Job blame the troubles that befell him on his wife?

To be popular as you grow older, it becomes necessary every half hour to take your own desires out to the yard and bury them.

Don't count what has been taken from you; count what is left. That is what gratitude means; counting what is left.

The memory of what was spent on foolishness in youth makes very poor jam for the crust of poverty in old age.

A man fools himself all the way in his walk into temptation with the belief that he is going into it on purpose to prove that he has the strength to resist it.

"I am sure," says the man of twenty, "that things will be better tomorrow." "I hope," says the man of forty, "they won't be any worse."

The Wrong Address

IT was all on account of the labels.

Dr. Gass had to send a box of pills to a patient, while there were half a dozen live chickens to be delivered to one of his friends.

Naturally, the labels got mixed and the messenger duly delivered the pills to the doctor's frined.

So far, not much harm had been done, but the patient was distinctly pained on receiving a hamper of live fowls and an envelope containing the following instruction:

"Two of these to be swallowed every half-hour in water."

His Diet

THE market place of Deddington-in-the-Hollow was busy and bustling, and Farmer John was held up for a moment by the traffic.

"Old sport," cried a rude boy from the pavement, "what d'you feed the nag on?"

Farmer John looked rather blue, but deigned to snort out the reply:

"Oats!"

"Why," chimed in the lad, "I thought you'd bin feeding 'im on butter tubs, for 'e shows the hoops in his inside pretty plainly."

A Soporific

TOM PURDIE, an old man servant in Sir Walter Scott's household, used to talk of the famous "Waverley Novels" as "our books," and said that the reading of them was the greatest comfort to him.

"Whenever I am off my sleep," he confided to Mr. James Skene, the author of "Memories of Sir Walter Scott," "I have only to take one of the novels, and before I have read two pages it is sure to send me asleep."

Married Life the Third Year ❧

No. 25—Which Shows That Most Women Love the Man Who Rides Over Them Roughshod

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WHEN Mrs. Morrison came home that evening Helen met her in the hall.

"Mrs. Morrison," hesitatingly, "may I speak to you for a moment?"

"Why, certainly," with a note of surprise, for Helen was so rarely in evidence. "Won't you come in while I take off my things?"

Her arms were full of bundles, and she threw them down on the bed as Helen followed her in.

"Oh, I do so hate to carry things—but I needed these, and it was too late to have them delivered tonight. But it's dreadful having to carry anything in a crowded car."

"Yes, I know they must be crowded at this hour," murmured Helen, wondering how she was to approach the subject of the room, which she so dreaded to bring up.

Mrs. Morrison was standing before the mirror taking off her veil. Helen watched her absently while she thrust the veil in the top drawer, threw her coat and hat on the trunk and then sat down to take off her gloves. She looked tired and worn, and Helen had a feeling almost of guilt that she was to give her added worry.

"It's been a hard day," throwing her gloves on the bed with a sigh. "One of the days when everything goes wrong. And one of my best girls left me—going to get married. But I'm glad for her that she's through with this daily grind."

Helen was sitting by the window pulling nervously at the cord of the window shade, and now she said abruptly:

"Mrs. Morrison, you remember when you came here that I said I couldn't rent you the room for any definite time?"

Mrs. Morrison looked up quickly. "Yes, you said only until your husband came back. But he isn't coming so soon," with a note of dismay.

A Disagreeable Task

Helen hesitated. "No, I don't know just when he's coming—but he doesn't want me to rent the room." And then quickly, "Oh, of course it's nothing personal—he doesn't even know you! It's only that he objects to my renting the room at all."

"And why?" asked Mrs. Morrison, coldly.

"It does seem unreasonable, I know," apologetically. "But he seems to think it reflects on him—that it implies he's not able to take care of me. I was afraid he'd think that, and I didn't intend to tell him, but his mother called here the other day and found it out. And she wrote him a long letter—I'm afraid she exaggerated things, for War—Mr. Curtis was furious."

Helen was uncomfortably conscious that she was telling Mrs. Morrison much more than she wished to. But she was talking nervously. It was most disconcerting to tell a person who had been in every way an exemplary roomer that she had to give up the room for such a reason.

"Well, of course, I have no choice," said Mrs. Morrison, still coldly. "It's our busiest season just now, and it will be hard for me to move. But you can have your room whenever you wish it—if you'll tell me when that is."

"Oh, no—no, please don't take it like that. I can't bear for you to be offended. I would so like to have you stay—but don't you see," almost tearfully, "I can't go against my husband's wishes."

"No, I suppose not," thoughtfully, "but it does seem rather unreasonable."

"I know it does; that's why I wrote him—and I insisted on letting you stay. It was the first time I had ever really gone against his wishes, and after that he wouldn't write me. He merely sent the weekly check folded in a blank sheet of paper. I stood it for two weeks and last night somehow—I got panic-stricken over it all—I felt I must hear from him—so I telegraphed I would do as he wished."

Helen was more than ever conscious that she was saying too much—that it was not necessary for her to go into such intimate details. But she felt nervously apologetic; she owed Mrs. Morrison more than a curt dismissal, and she talked on without quite realizing how much she had said.

A Strange Story

After a moment's silence, Mrs. Morrison said gently, "I think I understand—and I'll manage to find some place next week—probably a hotel—for you know the firm's sending me to Europe in May."

Then she rose suddenly and opened the trunk. "Wait a moment—there is something I want to show you."

The box she lifted out was full of letters. She looked through them hurriedly, took out a photograph and handed it to Helen.

"That is a man whom I know very well—and I think in some ways he must be much like your husband."

The face was an exceptionally strong one—one of determination and force. But there were hard, almost cruel lines around the mouth, and the eyes under the heavy brows were stern and piercing.

"It is a very strong face," murmured Helen, awkwardly, hardly knowing what to say.

"Yes, and he's a very strong man—but in many ways a very hard one. All his life he has dominated every one with whom he has come in contact—and now he is trying to dominate me. He rides roughshod over everything. And yet I think it's partly his very harshness, his brutal indifference that makes me care. Every other man seems weak in comparison. Somehow his very neglect and discourtesy make the ordinary attentions and courtesies of other men seem feminine. Oh," with a catch in her voice, "why does the mere brute force in a man appeal so to a woman? Sometimes I think all women are primitive savages—that they want a cave man to knock them over the head and drag them by the hair."

Helen was gazing at Mrs. Morrison with breathless silence. Then was her own experience a common one? Did other women love the men who roughly dominated them? And who was this man—whose picture she still held in her hand? She looked down at it now with keener interest.

There is nothing that draws two women more closely together than some similar and unhappy experience in love. And now Helen had to crush down a dozen eager questions. It was not mere curiosity that made her long to know more about this man—it was something far deeper than that.

Why She Left Him

Perhaps Mrs. Morrison divined her sympathy and the unasked questions, for she went on musingly:

"I told you about leaving Mr. Morrison because we were so desperately poor and he had so little ambition. That was a mistake. He was a good man, and he loved me, and I should have stayed with him. But I was more capable than he, and for a woman to be more capable than her husband is always an unfortunate thing—unless she is tactful enough to hide it. Anyway, I started out for myself. And I have succeeded—at least I make sixty dollars a week, which I suppose for a woman means a fair amount of success. But, oh, I've been so lonely!"

She hesitated a moment, and then went on.

"Of course I have met men—many of them. But no one for whom I have ever cared—no one who has ever dominated me as this man does. He's away now. He has interests in Toronto; he's there most of the time. And I—I simply live for the few days a month he is here. He only comes on business, he never comes purposely to see me, or if he did—he wouldn't give me the satisfaction of knowing it. He has never really said that he loved me—and yet I know that he does. I know he would rather be with me than with any one else. But, oh, he's so selfish and so self-centred."

"I wonder," asked Helen gently, "if all men who are strong are not self-centred?"

"Yes, I have thought of that," she said quickly. "It's the man who is forcible, who is unyielding and full of egoism—that is the man who dominates us and whom we love. While the man with less strength, less personal force, is apt to be more gentle and more unselfish—and yet that man rarely gets a woman's intense, abject devotion. Her instincts are primitive, and she loves most the man who rides over her roughshod."

Friendless

WITH a jerk the swinging doors of the bank were thrust open, and a jaded, sad-faced man entered.

"I want to cash this check, please," he remarked, addressing the teller and at the same time endorsing the slip he carried.

The cashier looked first at the check and then at the man and then back at the check again.

"You're a stranger here?" he asked doubtfully.

"I am," replied the man.

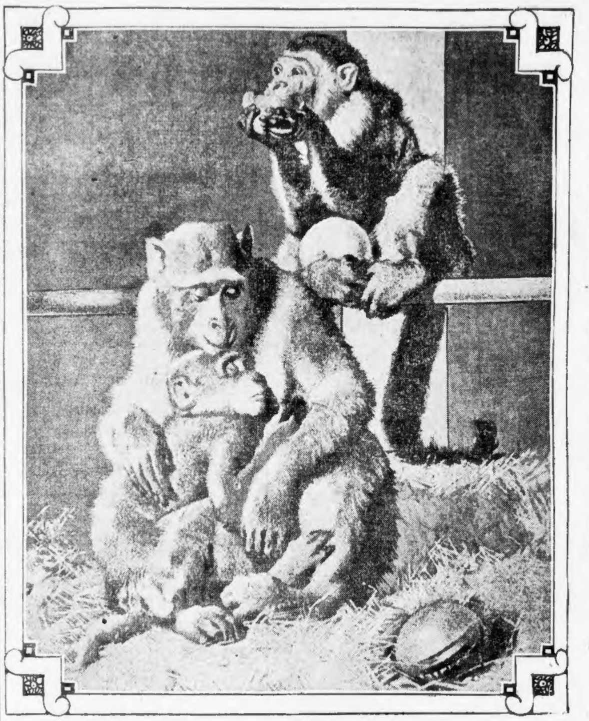
The gentleman of the gold was nonplussed.

"But have you no friends?" he inquired.

"Not one," came the reply. "You see, I'm a referee."

"The Sick Monkey" ❧ By Beatrice Fairfax

Why This Picture Is Typical of the Human Family



"THE SICK MONKEY," FROM THE FAMOUS PAINTING BY LANDSEER.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THIS famous painting by Lysander is most typical of the human family, and those who look carefully will find much to prove the claims made by those who favor the Darwinian theory.

The mother of the sick monkey has no thought or appetite for her dinner, which lies forgotten beside her. She is dominated by compassion, love, anxiety. Forgetful of self, her whole being is absorbed in her ailing offspring.

The father sits on his rail eating his dinner with relish. Fearing that he may lose part of it, he holds tight to a second piece with his feet.

The difference between the father monkey and the mother monkey is the difference between the father and the mother in the human family.

A True Picture

The men are urged to look at the picture thoughtfully and candidly; then if they look back to the days when they were young and ailing, they will confess, to the discredit of their sex, that Landseer's painting is true not only to monkey life, but to human life.

When a child is sick it is the mother whose love conquers desire for food and sleep and who watches through the long hours of the day and the longer hours of the night beside the bed of the little one.

The father is concerned, naturally, but this concern does not delay him at the dining-room table nor keep him awake at night.

If the cries of the sick child awaken him he opens sleepy eyes to find the mother ministering to it, and falls asleep again. The incident remains in his mind to this extent: The next day he tells inquiring friends that "we" were up all night and are worn out.

He is never the first to waken. Should this miracle happen he would nudge his wife reproachfully, saying:

"What kind of a mother are you to sleep when your child cries like that?"

If compelled to get up just once in a child's lifetime he relates to the end of his days that he took entire care of that child at night.

Pictures of a man in his nightshirt walking the floor with a crying baby in his arms are his conception of realism in art, and the jokes about man stepping on a tack when getting up to give soothing syrup to a howling youngster represent to him the combined wit of the ages.

With him it is "your baby" when it is fretful and needs attention, and "our" baby when it is asleep, or awake and laughing.

Always Blames Her

The sickness of the child interferes with his comfort, his happiness. He feels neglected and aggrieved, and doesn't understand why it should get sick. Out of this feeling that he is wronged, there grows that familiar old charge of "She did it," and he tells his wife that the child wouldn't have fallen sick if SHE had taken better care of it.

But, like the monkey in the picture, he enjoys his dinner, though grumbling that it was not ready on time. After eating it, he will scamper off to the society of other male monkeys, and demand their sympathy because the little monkey in his family is sick.

Then all the male monkeys will gibber and chatter and make violent cries and excited motions, all of which means that it is a hardship to be a father monkey. In the meanwhile the mother monkey at home ministers with a love that is divine, forgetful of self, asking nothing, hoping nothing, but the recovery of the little one in her arms.

Look at the picture again, and then declare, if you can, there is nothing in the theory that we are descended from monkeys.

Surprise to Order

THE athletic young person was captain of the Waggleton Wanderers Football Club, and his sister found him one day studying his countenance in a looking-glass.

"Whatever are you pulling those faces for, Jack?" she asked in tones of surprise.

"Sis," he replied, "the members of the club are going to make me a present tonight."

She wished him good luck.

"Yes," he continued. "So I'm cultivating a look of surprise, because I'm supposed to know nothing about it."

Tit for Tat

VERY warm indeed had been the argument.

"Look at me," cried the well-known lawyer, in crushing finality. "I never took a drop of medicine in my life, and I'm as strong as any two of your patients put together!"

"Pooh!" retorted the successful doctor. "I never went to law in my life, I'm as rich as any two dozen of clients put together!"

FEEL SHAKY, HEADACHY, BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED? TAKE CASCARETS

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, awful throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, and making the waste move on and out of the bowels. One taken tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head for months. Don't forget the children.

10 Cents. Never gripe or sicken.

DESMOND MUST BE FOUND!
HERSHFIELD

I.—OFF TO THE COURT.

In the hands of the Chinese police officials, the little party of white people is hurried to the court instituted by the new republican government of the country. It will be no novel experience for Desmond to be up before a judge, but Claude would feel the situation keenly, to say nothing of the lovely Rosamond. However, there is now no way out of it.

II.—IN THE WITNESS CHAIR.

Once in the Chinese court, Desmond is quickly singled out as likely to be the guilty one. Instead of being executed summarily, as would have been the case under the imperial regime, the scoundrel is allowed to take the witness chair to testify in his own behalf. Not that any one expects the villain can do anything to avert the punishment that's his due.

III.—TEARS, BITTER TEARS.

Once settled in the witness chair, Desmond feels quite at home. He has before this worked upon the emotions of jurors, and has no doubt of his ability to influence the Chinese. So he begins the story of his life—needless to say, an utterly false story, but one that causes strong Chinamen to weep. Never was there such a weepy court scene in China.

IV.—THE VILLAIN ESCAPES.

There is not a dry eye in the courtroom. Every juror is shedding tears as rapidly as the capacity of his almond eyes will permit. All are rubbing their streaming cheeks with their handkerchiefs, and Desmond is not one to neglect the advantage that this offers him. So while all the spectators are absorbed in weeping the villain scuttles under the judge's bench.

V.—THE SEARCH.

As soon as the spell of Desmond's lying words has died away, the jurors and the court attendants come to their senses and look around for the villain. But Desmond has disappeared, and as all hands frantically search for him without result, the conviction deepens that he has in some way got out of the building and is off to the coast.

VI.—THE VILLAIN'S TRIUMPH.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and they gotta quit kickin' me aroun'." The scoundrel looks out of the window of the courtroom and sees the crowd chasing down the street on a wild goose chase. Nobody suspected that the villain was concealed in the courtroom itself, and for the time Desmond triumphs. Tomorrow we shall see the result.

ADMASTON said that there was— and waited again. Dicky pulled his mustache with his other hand and fidgeted. Then he grinned again. Admaston began drumming impatiently on the desk. Dicky was becoming dizzy with nervousness.

"See here, Ellerdine," he said coldly, "you did not call on me to talk politics, I take it. Is there anything that you really want to say to me?"

Dicky sat up violently. "Well—er—yes—no," he stammered. "That is, you see, I—you"—— His voice died away in a gurgle.

"Well?"

Dicky swallowed hard and took a desperate plunge.

"It—I—wanted — that is — it's about Peggy!"

Admaston's lips came together in a thin line.

"Well?" he repeated in the same cold, uncompromising tone.

"Well," Dicky floundered on, "you see, old chap, it's such a beastly mess."

"It is. But you needn't have taken the trouble to come and tell me about it. Is that all?" He made as if to rise and show his visitor out. Dicky made an eager gesture of denial.

"No—no, Admaston," he went on hurriedly. "You see—Peggy—Peggy is cut up rough about this."

The lids slowly dropped half-way down over the gray eyes.

"Yes?"

"Did Peggy send you to me?" inquired Admaston at last.

"Oh, no—no!" replied his Lordship hurriedly.

There was a moment's silence. Then Admaston rose, walked over and put his hand on Ellerdine's shoulder.

"Ellerdine," he said, in not unfriendly tones, as he looked into Dicky's blinking eyes, "you lied like—like a gentleman to me that morning in Paris. Whatever else you are I know that you are a man of honor. You know more about this than I do. I guess everyone does," he added bitterly. "Don't you think—don't you know that I—I am right?"

Dicky got up suddenly. "Why,——, of course you are!" he cried impatiently, "but that is not the point. Right—what's that got to do with it? Think of the beastly mess! Think of Peggy!"

Admaston winced and turned abruptly away.

"Yes," he said, and Dicky felt but did not understand the anguish in his voice. "I do. Good bye, Ellerdine!" And the next thing Dicky clearly remembered he was on the sidewalk in front of the club. He was never able to understand why Admaston ended the interview just as Dicky thought he was convinced.

Many years ago there was a Prince who roamed in a garden of flowers all the day. It was written that he might seek the bloom that he desired above all others and make it his, and so find happiness. But he must take but one. One he plucked, but when he had pressed it to his lips he saw another that he desired more. The first he tossed aside and plucked the new bloom. As so he wandered through the garden and there was desolation in his path. At last in the very heart of the place of beauty he came upon a wondrous rose. With a cry of joy he dropped the last-plucked blossom and sprang forward to seize the rose. And lo! the thorns were ever in his way. Torn and bleeding, he strove to put them aside until he sank to the ground and died. And his blood watered the rose so that it grew more strong and beautiful.

All the years of his manhood Collingwood's simple if selfish system of life had been to take what goods the gods sent him and be happy. If the gods were not prompt enough with their consignments he was not averse to helping them help him amuse himself.

More than a few women had loved him and had gained from their love varying degrees of unhappiness and misery according to their several natures. But until he met Peggy Carew he had never loved a woman. And about the time he realized that he did love her George Admaston asked him to be best man at the wedding.

Continued success with women is likely to give the most level-headed man the impression that he is invincible. Collingwood was possessed of a mental power and a sense of proportion far above the average—but he had never been routed by a woman. He wanted Peggy and it never occurred to him when he laid seige to her heart after her marriage that he might not win in the end. Innocently, Peggy gave him all sorts of encouragement. He was sure that she loved him and for once in his life he honestly rejoiced. This time he was sincerely in love.

The fact that she was married to his best friend scarcely gave him a moment's pause. He loved Peggy and Peggy loved him—nothing else mattered. He intended no clandestine, unhallowed intrigue. He would steal in the open. Peggy had made a mistake in the man of her choice. That could be righted and it was just to the three of them that it should be.

The shock came when he learned that night in Paris that Peggy had simply been amusing herself with him—that she liked his looks and his admiration and attention and had never given him a serious thought beyond that point. It was a wholesome experience, albeit an unpleasant one. It gave him a clearer view of right and wrong than he had ever had before, and when the crash came a few hours later the chivalry that was in him broke the now cracked and always rotten shell that had warped it for years. His only thought was to save the woman he loved at any cost to himself.

He determined to see Admaston and make a final effort and convince him that he should withdraw the suit. Admaston was "out." Collingwood waited and gave him his choice of talking on the street or in his apartment. Admaston coldly invited him upstairs.

He remained standing and did not invite his unwelcome visitor to sit.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

DICKY GOT UP SUDDENLY, "THINK OF PEGGY!" HE EXCLAIMED. ADMASTON WINCED AND TURNED AWAY. "YES," HE SAID, AND DICKY FELT BUT DID NOT UNDERSTAND THE ANGUISH IN HIS VOICE.

Some Virtues of Sinners

By VIRGINIE TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

"Self praise goes little ways."

WE used to sing that when we were children. Yet, now that we are grown up, we hear what sounds like self praise, and it seems sometimes to go a long distance.

People do not declare in so many words that they are good, and better than we are, but they make such remarks as "I am sure I would never be tempted to do so-and-so"—naming an error committed by some one else—or "I pride myself on always being punctual," or "I have no patience with any one who confuses right and wrong. I always know what is right and try to do it," or "I keep strict account of every cent I spend, and know just where every penny goes and am most economical."

Now all these statements are doubtless true. But to those of us who are not absolutely sure of ourselves, and know that we make many mistakes which we might have avoided, they are distinctly depressing. And we turn with relief to the Sinner who does not constantly remind us of our own faults by referring to his virtues. Yet he possesses them.

No Claim to Virtue

One of these virtues is, perhaps, that he makes no claim to having any. Innate depravity, what some one calls "pure cussedness," prejudices most of us against the "I-am-holier-than-thou" person. We prefer the person who feels honestly that he has done those things which he ought not to have done, and has left undone those which he ought to have done.

Some very moral people are most trying to live with. Such is the husband who is always absolutely prompt at breakfast, no matter how dark the morning may be, and no matter if the wife and mother has been awake most of the night with one of the children who is ill. The ultra-prompt husband is on hand as the dining-room clock chimes the breakfast-hour, and always compares his watch with that timepiece, being careful to remark if the latter is a little slow.

He asks, gravely, "My dear, isn't breakfast ready?" adding occasionally, with labored politeness, "I am sorry to trouble you, but I really must ask you to have breakfast a little more promptly." I have even known such a husband to say frigidly: "It is so late that I will not wait for my coffee. Do not trouble yourself further. I was ready at breakfast time, but you and the coffee were not."

Personally, I would prefer a less rigid Sinner to this long-suffering and elaborately patient saint. Of course his wife is at fault. It is as much her business to have the coffee ready, as it is her husband's business to go to his office.

But when she has an ample reason for her lapse from punctuality, or is half-ill, I would prefer the less critical and more human person who would say cheerfully, "Dear, hurry things up a bit, won't you? I know you're tired, and all that, and it's a shame to hustle you so, but I'll get the mischief" (I don't insist that he put it more strongly) "if I'm late at the office." In fact, while the wife ought not to let him do it, it would not hurt the husband of a wornout woman to pour his own coffee occasionally, or to boil his own egg, if no maid is kept in the household.

And some men do such things—bless them! I have seen them, time and again. But then I've been fortunate in knowing Sinners with many virtues. All women want moral husbands, but they do not want impeccable ones. Had Saint Cecelia been married to a self-satisfied, exacting piece of humanity, who was always on time, and who invariably called attention to the fact that SHE was NOT—she might never have been canonized. I fancy that many a human being has been happier and, therefore, nearer sainthood, because her lot has been cast with that of a good-natured, uncritical Sinner.

Of course, the Sinner lets pass many an opportunity for "improving the occasion" in the minds of those with whom he comes in contact. When we tell him of some behavior of our own that is not an evidence of the best that is in us, he does not looked shocked. When we tell him of our resentment against some one who has treated us unfairly he is deliciously and unregenerately indignant in our behalf. One can go to him in a row of any kind, assured that he will not reprove one's resentment and will not assume a judicial attitude. When one is completely and satisfyingly angry, the judicial attitude on the part of a friend comes pretty close to being justification for manslaughter. But to meet the Sinner at such a time is actually comforting.

Never Censures Any One

For another of the virtues that the Sinner has is that he is very human. He seldom censures people who are rebellious, or unreasonable, or irritable. He has so many human frailties himself that he understands how other people feel. When you are suffering he does not remind you that other people are suffering more than you are. He simply says he is sorry, and may add: "Say any old thing you like! I don't mind!" And he doesn't. If expletives or groans relieve you, he is quite willing that you should give vent to them.

He takes people also just as he finds them, and doesn't bother if they do not come exactly up to conventional standards. Perhaps he does not go deep enough to analyze motives, but when any one warns him against an acquaintance he shrugs his shoulders and says: "He's treated me on the square, that's all I care to know. What he is to others is none of my business."

The Sinner is an inconsequent creature and is usually extravagant. We deplore this, still we let him pay our way sometimes. While the frugal man wonders if he really ought to spend any more money on mere amusement, the Sinner steps forward and treats the crowd. It is a reprehensible habit, especially as the stingy man gets into the way of waiting for the spendthrift to take the initiative, and thus loses the opportunity of cultivating the generous side of his own nature, if such exists. The man who disapproves of after-theatre suppers, and, if he is hungry after the play, takes his wife home and satisfies her hunger and his with crackers and cheese washed down by a generous supply of iced water, never shows his disapprobation of wasteful prodigality by declining the Sinner's invitation to be his guest at a high-priced restaurant.

The Sinner usually does his kindnesses because he enjoys doing them. Indeed he has a sheepish, ashamed expression of countenance if he is accused of perpetrating some deed of benevolence. He certainly does not perform these deeds to be seen of men. That may be one of the results of not caring much what men think of one. Nor, when he gives, is it always toward charities that are recognized as worthy. His gift may be to some poor wretch who is pauperized by such assistance, but let us be glad that the motive that prompts the deed is of more account than the deed itself.

Not a Hypocrite

And, with all his faults, the Sinner is not a hypocrite, for, as he makes no pretences to impeccability, he does not have to live up to any. The world is full of POSEURS—most of them unconscious of their pose—who have assumed a certain attitude even to themselves until they have come to believe in it and do not know themselves. They are always, as it were, sitting on the fence and watching themselves pass by. But our Sinner has no pose, unless that of seeming to his fellowman worse than he really is.

Were some persons who consider themselves "as good as they know how to be" more like the Sinner, they might not be as self-righteous as they are, but they would be much more agreeable!

A Certainty

The workman was digging. The inquisitive wayfarer stopped for a moment to look on.

"My man," said the wayfarer at length, "what are you digging for?"

The workman looked up. "Gold," he replied.

"Gold!" ejaculated the amazed wayfarer, "and when do you expect to strike it?"

"Saturday," replied the workman, and resumed operations.

MAN'S TOE SPLIT OPEN

Resinol Saved Weeks of Suffering

Probably he was lending a hand in house-cleaning. We don't know—but here is what he says:

"Some time ago I met the very painful mischance of having a heavy case fall on the big toe of my left foot. The toe was split open and I was laid up for a few days. A friend recommended the use of Resinol Ointment. I used it with such good effect that the serious looking wound healed in about a week after I began to apply the Ointment, aided by the Resinol Soap as a cleanser. Without the use of the Resinol Ointment and Soap I am satisfied that I would have had at least a month of suffering, plus confinement and the loss of the toe nail. The nail remained intact, and it is but fair to say that your Ointment and Soap did the speedy work."

P. S. M. Monro,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

The very best dressing for boils is soothing, healing Resinol Ointment. It is equally good for felons, carbuncles, cuts, wounds and all skin abrasions. The action of Resinol Ointment is direct, and its effects promptly manifest in the relief of pain and the reduction of inflammation and irritation. It quickly relieves eczema, ringworm, barber's itch, pimples and other eruptive skin diseases.

Resinol Ointment can be used on raw or inflamed surfaces with safety and comfort. It cannot harm the skin of the younget infant. Resinol Soap is a high-class health soap. It protects and preserves the skin and should be used in connection with Ointment. All druggists sell the Resinol preparations; or, if you prefer to make a free trial, write for samples to Dept. 11, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

15⅜c. ASKED FOR COPPER; SHARE PRICES HIGHER

By W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, March 25.—Midday—Stock prices had a booming tendency when exchanges opened today. In New York a number of leaders went up a point or more, and American Smelting jumped 2⅝ at the start.

In Boston the demand for copper shares is said to have been greater than for many months. Most of the active issues were in demand. Among those which sold higher at the start were North Butte, Franklin, Utah Consolidated, Shannon, Lake and Calumet & Arizona. The latter went up a point.

It is stated that consumers were met with an asking price of 15⅜ cents pound for copper metal today before sellers had an opportunity to learn the whole extent of the day's demand.

At the opening of the London market, spot and futures were up £1 3s. 9d.

The Boston News Bureau says: "Anaconda directors meet this week for dividend action, but there will be no change from the regular quarterly basis of fifty cents a share. Amalagamated directors meet in April, when the dividend will be increased from $2 to $4 per annum, by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of $1 per share."

Stock Prices Open Higher.

When the New York market opened there was an upward movement which was sensational as to some issues, they advancing from 1½ to 2½ points. Reading led the railway group. It opened at 159⅝, or ¾ above Saturday's closing, and then shot up 1⅛. American Smelting shot up 2⅝, opening 1⅝ higher at 87¼ and continuing to advance. Amalgamated started a point higher and gained ½ more.

At the end of fifteen minutes profit-taking set in and many of the stocks lost some of early gains. Steel common opened at 69½, or an advance of ⅝, and later went ⅝ higher. Other gains were as follows: Pennsylvania ½, Atchison ¼, Erie ¼, Lehigh Valley ½, Union Pacific ⅝, Missouri Pacific ¾, Canadian Pacific ½, Southern Pacific ⅜, Southern Railroad ¼.

Market experts expressed the opinion that the market is entering upon a better era and that the bull operations are not the result of manipulation. The Curb was firm.

In the London market American railways made the best showing of any section early in the day and there was more trading in them at a whole than for some time. Consols advanced at the start, but home rails were rather irregular. Rio Tintos rose to 74, the highest level of this movement, and at that price had scored a net gain of ⅝ over Saturday's final quotation.

Copper Still Higher in London.

When the London copper market opened today spot promptly advanced £1 3s. 9d., selling at £67 18s. 9d., while futures at £68 15s. made the same gain. To cable that the market is strong, which was done, is quite superfluous. There was a big demand for pig tin there, which sent the price of spot up £1, while futures advanced £1 15s. Spanish pig lead went up 1s. 3d. In the New York stock market last week 382,400 shares of Amalgamated were traded in and the net gain in price was 7⅞ points. The total of American Smelting sales was 137,300 and the price advance for the week was 9⅛ points.

The rise in the prices of copper metal in London last week explained the situation as regard metal supplies in Europe. A week ago today spot copper closed there at £64.16s.3d., and futures at £65.11s.3d. The net gain in price up to this morning was £3.2s.6d. for spot and £3.3s.9d. for futures.

Iron and Steel Making Reports.

It is estimated that the blast furnaces of this country are now turning out pig iron at the rate of more than 26,000,000 tons a year. The high monthly record was made in 1910, but present figures approach it closely. There is a heavy demand in the Pittsburg district for steelmaking irons, and the sales of Bessemer and basic last week amounted to about 25,000 tons.

Some surprise was expressed over the announcement that the price of lake ore had been cut from 65 to 75 per cent. for heavy transactions in the season of 1912-13.

Consumers are looking for some lowering of pig iron prices as the result of reduction in rail freights, dockage charges and cost of lake transportation. The producers, however, have make so little profit for a long time that they are likely to stand firm against concessions. It is stated that 18,000,000 tons of last year's ore supply are still unused. Transactions since March 1 have aggregated 535,000 tons. But the sales would have totalled more but for unsettled conditions in the coke and coal fields. Regarding steel prices one statement from Pittsburg is:

"Prices for steel bars, plates and shapes were advanced $1 a ton by the Republic Company, following the lead of the other mills in a determined stand for more remunerative prices. Light section rails have been advanced $1.50 to $2 per ton, and galvanized sheet iron has gone up $2 per ton."

Another statement is to the effect:

"The steel trade here has not taken to heart the reported advances of $1 a ton by the Steel Corporation and leading independents on merchant bars, shapes and plates. There is still considerable heavy steel to be had at the old price of $1.15 Pittsburg mill, and there was no disposition up to the close of the week by several of the larger independent producers of merchant bars to withdraw the $1.10 minimum and substitute one of $1.15 as was demonstrated last year."

Still another report is to the effect that the demand for finished steel has stopped just short of the full capacity of the Pittsburg district.

Prospect of Big Strikes.

The situation between operators and miners in the anthracite region had not materially changed this morning, and whether the men will go out on April 1 is undecided. If the operators do not make enough concessions to enable a compromise, it looks as if the miners would make good on their determination to quit. There is much pressure being brought to bear upon both sides and well-informed persons think that during this week there will be mutual concessions. Some individual operators are willing to grant the men a 10 per cent. wage increase. They want 20. Big coal carriers are opposed to giving miners any pay increase at all, and their excuse is that they will have to raise prices to coal consumers if they do. In regard to the bituminous field situation, it is said that operators are willing to grant the miners a 5 per cent. pay raise, if they will drop their other demands.

The possibility of a strike by the locomotive engineers on nearly fifty Eastern roads is as great as ever. The railroad managers will reply to Brotherhood demands today. The engineers want more pay.

Government Cotton Statistics.

More cotton statistics were furnished by the Washington census bureau today. The report shows 16,723,221 bales of cotton as the supply for six months' period ending February 29. Stocks at the beginning of the period were 1,375,031; ginnings 15,279,522; and imports 68,668. Distribution is: Exports 8,007,814 bales; consumption 2,623,379; stocks close of February 6,092,062. Segregation of stocks held February 29 is: Manufacturers 1,542,639; independent warehouses 2,280,866; elsewhere 2,268,523 bales. Supply and distribution of cotton in the U. S.: Supply, September 1, 1911, to February 29, 1912, total 16,723,221.

AUTHOR APPEARS WHILE MEN SEARCH

PHILADELPHIA, March 25.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the home of J. Martin Woolsey, traveler and writer at Willow Grove. While men were searching the ruins for the body of Mr. Woolsey, who was supposed to have been burned to death, the author made his appearance, having suddenly gone to New York the night before without acquainting any one of his intention. Mr. Woolsey is a member of the Folk Lore Society of London and of the Folk Lore Society of New York. His literary prominence came in 1910 when he won a $10,000 cash prize for the publication of his book, "The Garden of Eden; or The Discovery and Final Solution of the Mystery of the Woman, the Tree and the Serpent."

HOW TWENTY CANNIBAL KINGS PROPOSED TO ME. An extraordinary story by the only American girl who ever went through Savage Africa attended only by blacks. In Sunday's AMERICAN.

HOLDS DEATH DUE TO LACK OF CARE

Judge Charles F. Perkins of the Brookline Municipal Court today filed his finding of an inquest held regarding the death of John P. O'Connor, who was injured by a soda generator explosion in the drug store at the corner of Cypress and Boylston streets, Brookline, a short time ago. Judge Perkins finds that the accident was due to want of proper care, and no criminal liability can be attached to any person. The judge asserts that with due care nothing serious could have occurred.

Boston Port Improvements Help Other New England Cities—Take Lowell, for Example

Everybody in Boston believes in the development of this magnificent port. That means that everybody who has given the matter any consideration believes enthusiastically in any improvement that will bring new business and increased prosperity to this city.

It is only of late years that the position of Boston from the standpoint of a strategical port has been broached to Boston. When the situation became thoroughly known Boston people said in unison:

"We want this port developed. We want to come into our own. We have the best natural port on the Atlantic Ocean and why should it not be utilized?"

A bill went through the Legislature for the improvement. That meant that the State was backing it. And it is just possible that other cities than Boston asked this question:

"What is that to us?"

That is a natural question. It is a horse-sense question.

The building of new docks in Boston and the extension of the Grand Trunk Railroad to this city is not romance. It is a cold business proposition.

If the building of new docks, the expansion of the port facilities, the extension of railroads and the establishment of steamship lines in connection with Boston REALLY MEANS the good of the city, the State and all of New England, it is time that ALL of the people found it out and became boosters for the project.

The best business sense of Boston says that the port of Boston should be improved—that the Grand Trunk Railroad should be extended to this city.

But the improvement of this port by either new railroads or steamships not only helps Boston but HELPS EVERY OTHER CITY AND TOWN in this section of the country.

General Hugh Bancroft, director of the port of Boston, brought out this fact in an address to Lowell citizens.

"It is no exaggeration to say," declared General Bancroft, "that Lowell and the other important industrial cities of Massachusetts and New England have more at stake in the development of the port of Boston than has Boston itself, for Boston is not so much an industrial as it is a financial and mercantile centre.

"On high class goods, say fine dry goods, or first class freight, the rate to New York is 27 cents, steamboat side, and to Boston steamboat side, 14 cents, making a saving of 13 cents in favor of the port of Boston.

"The development of the port of Boston should, therefore, mean 13 cents per one hundred saved on all piece dry goods shipped from Lowell to the Southwest."

It will be seen by this statement of General Bancroft that not only Boston but every other city in New England will be benefited by the expenditure of the $9,000,000 appropriated by the Legislature for Boston port improvements, and the other millions that are to be expended for the same purpose.

What is intended to be conveyed by this is that the men and women who pay taxes outside of Boston, and thus help to develop Boston's port, are doing something NOT ALONE for Boston but for THEMSELVES.

Strength to Congressman John A. Thayer in His Fight for Patent Law Reform

The news from Washington indicates that Congress will probably turn to the bill introduced by Congressman Thayer of Worcester to correct some of the most flagrant abuses of our patent law.

The recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, holding that patentees had certain collateral powers which are clearly injurious to the public interest, an opinion from which the Chief Justice and a minority of the court has strongly dissented, and which is denounced by thoughtful men of both parties in Washington, has turned the attention of our Federal legislators to the bill of our Congressman Thayer.

If Mr. Thayer can obtain legislation which will make our patent law cease to defeat the very purpose of its existence and cease to be oppressive to the people and often oppressive also to the advancement of the arts and sciences, he will have done something for which the people of Massachusetts and of his own district will make him grateful acknowledgment.

The abuse of our patent law has become intolerable of late years. In order to encourage invention, the National Constitution gave Congress the right to fix a term of years during which the inventor may exclusively enjoy the profits of the use of his invention.

But long ago it was discovered that the inventor rarely obtained more than an insignificant profit from his invention, and often no profit at all. And now it has come to pass that even the public receives no benefit from the invention, for some powerful monopoly, using another invention to do the same thing and realizing that the new device would make a dangerous competitor, buys up the patent and suppresses the invention, depriving the public of all benefit from it.

The patent laws were meant to quicken the inventive genius of the people, that all might enjoy the benefit of every man's invention by giving the inventor the exclusive profit upon the use of his invention for a few years.

But to use our patent laws for the purpose of suppressing invention is to nullify the law and hold back progress. This is the old monopoly vice appearing in another form and acting through another agency.

MR. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST desires to announce that he has lately acquired the magazine known as "The World To-Day," and that beginning with the April issue this magazine will be published as HEARST'S MAGAZINE.

HEARST'S MAGAZINE will be conducted as a magazine of advanced and authoritative opinion, a forum for open and unprejudiced discussion of the dominant questions of the day—political, social, economic, financial, moral and ethical.

It will present the best literature obtainable on two continents. It will publish the strongest fiction by the most noted authors, but even its fiction will appear with a purpose. This purpose will be the discussion in fiction form of the great questions that interest the intelligent reading public of America and affect the progress of the world.

In the first issue of HEARST'S MAGAZINE the opening chapters of a novel by Winston Churchill will appear. Winston Churchill, the author of "Richard Carvel," "The Crisis," "The Crossing," "Coniston" and other notable books, has in this new novel a story and a purpose that will catch and hold the attention of the American people.

In presenting American History and great American problems in fiction form, Mr. Churchill has succeeded as no other novelist has succeeded. "The Inside of the Cup," to appear serially in HEARST'S MAGAZINE, is Mr. Churchill's strongest, most ambitious work. It has been six years in preparation.

The expressive title of the novel, "The Inside of the Cup," is taken from the Scriptural quotation:

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess."

"Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and the platter, that the outside of them may be clean also."

In addition to Winston Churchill's serial, the April number of HEARST'S MAGAZINE will contain the first of "Behind the Beard," a series of short stories by David Graham Phillips.

These stories, the last written by Mr. Phillips before his death, are stories that every American who is interested in his country's welfare should read.

Charles Dana Gibson will illustrate Mr. Phillips' stories, and James Montgomery Flagg will illustrate "The Inside of the Cup."

In the April issue of HEARST'S MAGAZINE will appear also the first of a series of articles by W. Morgan Shuster on his personal experiences in Persia, "Shuster's Own Story." The first article is entitled "Cossack Rule in Persia."

Another feature of HEARST'S MAGAZINE for April will be the "Rockefellers of Ancient Rome," by Guglielmo Ferrero.

Believing that the modern world will profit by the mistakes of the ancient world, HEARST'S MAGAZINE has asked Dr. Guglielmo Ferrero to point out the important parallels between ancient and modern history.

In the April issue he tells us that the private philanthropists and injunction granting judges are two modern American institutions that flourished in ancient Rome. The parallel he points out is the more remarkable in that it does not apply to modern Europe. We must go back to ancient Rome, according to Ferrero, for a parallel for the powerful though temporary bureaucracy that we have created in America.

Other contributors are Frederick Townsend Martin, Alfred Henry Lewis, Elbert Hubbard, Dr. Henry Smith Williams and Charles Edward Russell.

The aim of HEARST'S MAGAZINE is to make information easily assimilated, to instruct its readers while entertaining them. The reader therefore will find that every article in HEARST'S MAGAZINE is intensely interesting, no matter how important the question discussed.

HEARST'S MAGAZINE will constitute a liberal education to be acquired without effort.

The price of HEARST'S MAGAZINE, instead of being increased, will be reduced from twenty-five cents to fifteen cents.

It is the purpose of the management to put this liberal education within the reach of the greatest possible number of thinking people.
